Invalid Mother Saves 2 in Fire

Today

Great Peter Knew How. For Gold Star Mothers, Adam's Old Excuse. Rich, Happy Quebec.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7.

THE shooting of the Mexican President, his wife and another, none killed, fortunately, will mean drastic action in Mexico. No nation will tolerate, even in civilized times, a campaign for the control of government by murder. Back of the young hand that fired the shots, there stands in the shadow, some murderous organization, relying on terror and using servile tools for its purpose. ____.

ORTIZ RUBIO and the powerful Portes Gil, former president, now Rubio's secretary of the interior, will find a way to terrify the terrorists. They could learn something by reading the history of Peter the Great. That giant Muscovite terrorized the most terrible. A branch of his army presumed to plot for government control. He killed thousands of them in a few days.

WHEN he discovered a plot against his life, as he did often, his action struck dreadful terror.

Living conspirators were gathered around a great scaffold of death and torture. Conspirators that were dead, some of them executed, were taken from their graves, placed on sledges drawn by hogs and dragged beneath the scaffold. There, the blood of the living conspirators, tortured and killed, dripped upon the dead conspirators.

THAT is unthinkable in our day, no matter what the provocation. But Mexico will have to strike at the root of her murder trouble, or confess failure. And the men now in power will not do that. Peter was horribly brutal but he died in his bed, and forced Russia to accept teaching from Western Europe, creating what is powerful in Russia today.

NONE withstood him The terrible Charles of Sweden could not overcome him. He even made old Russians cut off their long beards, to prove that Russia's only will must be the will of Peter. Many old Russians saved their beards, had them put in their coffins, that they might rise with whiskers and look respectable. They forgot that in the Bible it says "On that day, the Lord shall shave with a razor that is hired."

BEFORE the would-be murderer shot him, Ortiz Rubio, in his brief inauguration address, had promised that all classes of Mexicans "should enjoy the privilege of being classed as men." Those familiar with conditions under which Mexico's lower classes have lived, and with the attitude toward them of the upper classes will know what that means to the Mexican under dog.

CONGRESS votes more than $5,000,000 that "Gold Star" mothers may visit their sons' graves in France. Of 11,000 mothers entitled to go, 6,000 have expressed a desire to go. Many cannot go, because of duties at home. Others, perhaps, dread the sorrowful shock. To those that do not go, Congress should pay in cash the pro rata amount that it would cost to send them, about one thousand dollars. No other course would be fair.

RICHARD STEWART, rug merchant, of Warren, O., is in jail. Judge Perry found him guilty of molesting a woman. Stewart offers an excuse as old as Adam, "The woman led me on." In jail, Stewart refuses to eat, and is very thin, after 23 starving days. It would have been fortunate for Adam, and for us, but bad for the clothing business, had Adam likewise refused to eat.

THE Quebec Liquor Commission reports the provincial treasury full to overflowing after paying billions in tariff and other taxes to the Dominion government. American prohibition is thanked for Quebec's wonderful prosperity. American citizens go there to drink and spend. American bootleggers go there to import supplies.

THIS nation loses hundreds of millions that it once collected from brewers and others, and spends other millions in the fight against bootlegging. However, the law and constitutional provision exist. And the duty of government is to make the best fight possible, against heavy odds.

CONGRESS has appropriated $587,000 to fight the pink boll weevil in Arizona. An experimenter in this state believes that cotton and other plants might be fed in such a way as to discourage pests that destroy them.

CERTAIN minerals, it is suggested, could be harmlessly absorbed by plants and would be fatal to the attacking insect life. Perhaps what Dr. Ehrlich did with his salvarsan might be done to other pests, as harmful as the salvarsan specialty.

FIGHTS WAY TO SLEEPING CHILDREN

Woman Awakens Pair, Then Leads Them to Safety; Limps Through Smoke

Struggling from her bed, where she had been suffering from a dislocated vertebra and heart trouble, Mrs. Lydia Torkler, 39, called the fire department early today and then rescued her two children from flames that swept her home at 3002 Perrysville avenue.

HUSBAND AWAY

Mrs. Torkler and her children, Arthur, 12, and Marjorie, 4, were sleeping on the third floor of their three-story brick dwelling. Her husband, John W. Torkler, had left the house a short time before, and Mrs. Torkler was awakened by dense smoke that filled her room. Although she had been ill for a long period, she hobbled to the basement and found the lower part of the house a mass of flames from an overheated furnace.

Notifying the telephone operator that her home was on fire, Mrs. Torkler awakened her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Dreher, 30, who occupied a room on the second floor. Although the flames were trailing their way through the walls and smoke was pouring up the stairways and filling every room, the invalid woman continued her way to the room of her two children and led them down the stairs to the street.

LIMP FROM HOUSE

When firemen reached the scene the mother with her frightened children, clad in their night clothes, limped from the house.

Firemen assisted the mother and her frightened children to the homes of neighbors, who supplied them with clothing. Mrs. Dreher escaped unhurt. District Chief Daniel Jones said the fire was caused by an overheated furnace. He estimated the damage at $4,000.

TAXIS TO BEGIN NIGHT SERVICE

The strike of 1,400 taxicab drivers entered upon its twenty-seventh day today with an announcement from the Parmelee Transportation Company that it would attempt to operate at night.

Under police protection, and with guards in the cabs, the company plans to operate machines until 9 p. m. Heretofore the cabs have been withdrawn from the streets at dark in fear of violence.

Yellow Cab Company executives informed Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh that at least 15 cabs would be placed in service for the initial night run.

Supt. Walsh immediately made plans, he announced, to provide adequate police protection for the taxis. Afternoon details of motor-

SLEEPING BABY KILLED BY GAS

Lucille Lau, 15-months-old daughter of Matthew Lau, of 412 Hancock street, died this morning, the victim of carbon monoxide poisoning, in spite of efforts of police and physicians who for two hours worked over her supplying oxygen.

Shortly before midnight the baby was found unconscious in her crib in a bedroom in which a small gas stove was burning. The father carried her to the drug store of Frank Kaminsky, at 1115 Herron avenue, and police were called. Wagonmen Robert McNalley and Harry R. Miller of the Forty-third street police station responded.

The officers and Dr. S. R. Cohen, of 1703 Beaver avenue, who was in the drug store, worked over the child, assisted by Dr. F. P. Parnonatowicz, of 3033 Brereton avenue, who was summoned.

Famous Bareback Rider, Ex-Pittsburgher, Dies

Nearly 50 years ago, Ringling's circus moved into old Allegheny on stage coaches, spread its tents in Exposition Park and the whole town turned out to see the show.

Young Alex Seabert, wild about horses, was one of the volunteer water carriers.

One spring day he told his home-folk on Troy Hill that he had landed a job. He left, sitting high on a circus wagon, as it rumbled out of town.

He came back, now and then. Bright bill posters cried out about Alex—The World's Most Daring Bareback Rider. Year after year he thrilled hundreds of thousands. Always he was the "World's Most Daring Bareback Rider."

Tomorrow, Alex Seabert may come back home. His brother, Andrew Seabert, today was en route to Coney Island where Alex was found last night—dead in bed. He was 70, and had lived alone for five years, since the death of his wife.

He had never returned to this city to live. His love of the sawdust ring had kept him near New York, where until two years ago he appeared with the circus at the Hippodrome during the winter, and with his riding academy horses during the summer.

His brother and nephew, Clarence Seabert, 1749 Perrysville avenue, may bring the body back. They don't know yet.

GRAHAM TELLS BERKEY URGED DRY CLEANUP

U. S. Attorney Here on Stand For Somerset Judge, Who Denies Part in Rum Ring

Judge John A. Berkey strode into the camp of his accuser in Federal Court today for a witness to help him prove that he was not a member of a booze conspiracy, which the government charges existed in Somerset County.

United States Attorney Louis E. Crahan, one of the prosecuting officers, was called to the stand by the defense to testify that in the summer of 1928 Judge Berkey asked him to send prohibition agents to Somerset County.

"I went to Somerset with James M. Moss, assistant prohibition administrator in 1928," testified Graham, who was then legal advisor to the prohibition department. "We were visiting the district attorneys of various counties asking their co-operation in the enforcement of prohibition.

"REQUESTED AGENTS"

"Judge Berkey told me he would assist and asked me to send prohibition agents to him. I told him I would make such recommendations.

"I reported Berkey's requests for agents to Mr. Pennington, the prohibition administrator. In April, 1929, Berkey complained that no agents had been sent."

Moss and Ira Friedline, clerk of Somerset courts, followed Graham to the stand. Moss corroborated Graham's testimony.

Friedline produced court records to show that four of the government's witnesses, confessed bootleggers, had been sentenced to jail by Judge Berkey.

On cross-examination Graham said he believed that the agents had been sent to Somerset by Pennington and that they had conducted a private investigation.

POLICEMAN TESTIFIES

The defense also put on the stand, S. W. McMillen, police chief of Windber, Pa., Somerset County, to prove that Berkey wanted to "clean up" Somerset county. McMillen testified that

DRYS PROPOSE MODIFYING JONES LAW

New Bill to Revise Hoover Crime Commission's Plan For Trials Without Jury

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Revising the Hoover Law Enforcement Commission's "juryless trial" plan for cutting Federal Court congestion of prohibition cases, Representative Christopherson (Rep.), of South Dakota, a dry, today announced he would introduce a new bill amending the Jones "five and ten law."

The proposal will be made with the approval of Dean Roscoe Pound, of Harvard, member of the crime commission.

The upset of the commissioner system of dealing with minor cases came at the end of hearings by the House Judiciary Sub-committee, of which Christopherson is chairman.

DRYS ASSAIL PLAN

It climaxed a day of activity in the prohibition fight, during which the House continued debate on the bill transferring the Prohibition Bureau to the treasury, and Representative Beck (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, warned the House the Republican party cannot remain "half wet and half dry."

Christopherson's decision to revise the bills he introduced for the Crime Commission came after dry members assailed the plan because it permits a district attorney to indict a prohibition offender for a felony if he refuses to plead guilty to a lesser charge.

Dean Pound declared the commissions circuitous route of cutting Federal Court congestion was forced by the Jones law, which makes prohibition violations a felony.

APPROVAL VOICED

He refused to recommend ammendment for the commission, but said he personally did not object to it.

Representative Hammer (Dem.) of North Carolina, a dry, favored amending the Jones law rather than adopting the commission's "juryless trial" plan.

Beck Warns 'Dry Fanatics' Threaten G. O. P. Destruction

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—(INS.)—Representative James M. Beck (Rep.), of Philadelphia, warned the house today that the Republican party faces destruction unless it "saves its soul" from "fanatical drys."

Hailed as the House's greatest orator, an ex-solicitor general and a leading speaker in the Hoover campaign, Beck emerged in his first prohibition speech as the new oracle of House liberals.

Drawing upon his experience as a constitutional lawyer, he declared the history of the English-speaking people sustained "the right of revolution" against the Eighteenth Amendment.

GLORIA GOULD BISHOP

MACDONALD ALSO URGES BATTLESHIP ABOLITION

Prime Minister's Statement Hailed by Americans as Agreeing on All Points

LONDON, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald this afternoon issued a pronouncement of the British government's policy for the naval conference which members of the American delegation declared they regarded as complete acceptance of points put forward in the American statement late yesterday.

The American statement issued by Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, head of the delegation, fixed a way to parity between the two nations.

The British desire for ultimate abolition of battleships and submarines and for immediate limitation of cruisers and other categories were outstanding points in the detailed concrete statement of the British stand.

BRITISH CONCESSION

Mr. MacDonald made a concession to the French and Japanese viewpoints. While advocating immediate abolition of the submarine, he indicated willingness to agree to a continuance of this weapon if it was restricted to purely defensive purposes.

He also indicated willingness to allow the transfer of some tonnage in cruiser categories.

While the American delegation

GLORIA GOULD BRIDE AGAIN

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—(INS.)—Gloria Gould Bishop, adventurous and vivacious daughter of the late George Jay Gould, today was again a bride.

After almost a year of matrimonial freedom in Sunny Italy, the divorced wife of Henry A. Bishop, Jr., returned to her native land to marry suddenly a friend of her youth.

The bridegroom is Walter MacFarlane Marker, 31, wealthy contractor. Born in Chicago, Barker's family moved to East Orange, N. J., in his boyhood. At present he lives on Park avenue. He is the son of Alfred Barker and this is his first marriage.

The couple made every effort to keep it secret. While newspapermen and photographers vainly attempted to pursue them, the bridal pair bobbed up in Yorkville Court and were quietly married in the chambers of Magistrate Bernard J. Douras. The bride was dressed in green. The bridegroom's sister, Miss Ada Barker, and his brother, Joseph, were the only witnesses.

20 DEAD IN MINE BLAST, 5 SAVED

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Discovery of four more bodies in the gas-swept mine of the Standard Coal Mining Company at Standardville, Utah, shortly before noon today brought to 20 the list of dead in an explosion there late last night.

Five men were brought out alive shortly before the bodies were found.

The fate of one miner remains undetermined.

Four other men came out of the mine without aid immediately after the explosion, of the total of 30 who were working on the night shift.

The five rescued this morning had barricaded themselves against the deadly fumes of the carbon monoxide gas and had not suffered any ill effects, it was stated at the office of the mining company. One of them was reported to be "a little shaky," but this was believed to be the result of bad air rather than gas fumes.

The No. 1 slope, where the rescued men were found, was reported free of gas.

With the mine cleared of the fumes through restoration of the ventilating system and with very little debris thrown down by the explosion, it was said the rescuers did not find their way in the mine seriously impeded.

The explosion was not violent, it was said, and the deaths so far disclosed are assumed to have been caused by the gas fumes.

'Pig Woman,' of Hall-Mills Trial, Dies in Hospital

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Feb. 7.—(INS.)—Mrs. Jane Gibson, one of the striking characters in the famous Hall-Mills murder mystery, died today in Jersey City Hospital.

She had been suffering from cancer for many years. She died shortly before noon.

Mrs. Gibson, who lived an eccentric life on an out-of-the-way farm, was the principal state witness at the trial of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall. She was ill then, and testified from a stretcher.

Mrs. Hall was acquitted and cleared of all charges in connection with the murder of her husband, Dr. Edward Wheeler Hall, and Mrs. Elinor Mills, choir singer in his church.

Mrs. Hall, who is now seriously ill in a New York Hospital, was reported last night to have sent a gracious telegram to Mrs. Gibson, reading:

"A heart without malice sends you forgiveness."

This story, however, was denied shortly before Mrs. Gibson died.

BRITAIN AGREES TO AMERICA'S PROGRAM FOR NAVAL CUT

MACDONALD WOULD BAN WARSHIPS

Prime Minister's Statement Hailed by Americans as Agreeing to All Points

expressed the opinion that the statement was acceptance of Secretary Stimson's announcement it informally indicated there were certain new thoughts in the British statement which must be discussed with American naval experts before the Americans could indicate complete agreement with it. These points include for example, reduction of aircraft tonnage and limitation of the size of aircraft carriers.

The MacDonald memorandum was declared to represent the views not only of the British government and British experts but of all the dominions. The statement was put into present form last week and was discussed with dominion representatives, all of whom are said to have agreed.

Both the British and American plans put the battleship strength at 15 each, capital ships thus maintaining the 5-5-3 ratio of the Washington conference.

SUBSEQUENT PARLEY

This new alignment of capital ship fleets would take place within 18 months after signing of the London disarmament treaty, the British document set forth. It would also provide for no battleship replacements before a subsequent conference in 1935 during which time the entire question of capital ships would be the subject of negotiations between the naval powers.

"Indeed," said Prime Minister MacDonald, "the British government wishes to see an agreement whereby battleships will in due time disappear altogether, as it considers them a very doubtful proposition in view of their size and cost and of the development of the efficiency of air and submarine attack."

Great Britain also favors reduction in the size of capital ships from 35,000 tons to 25,000 tons, and of guns from 16 inches to 12 inches. In British opinion the age length of battleships should be increased from 20 years to 26 years.

SUBMARINE BAN

The document in proposing complete abolition of submarines says naval experts feel that "the argument submarine are weapons solely of defense was destroyed by the experience of the last war that in war conditions it is an arm of attack."

If abolition cannot be agreed upon, the proposal declared, Britain will put forward proposals limiting submarines rigidly to defense requirements. In any case, Britain will press for limitation of submarines to the lowest possible figure. The statement revealed the British propose to urge revival of the Root resolution governing submarine activities.

The document also proposed reduction of the total aircraft carrier tonnage of the United States and Great Britain from 135,000 to about 100,000, with similar adjustments in the total of other nations.

WOULD LIMIT SIZE

It also proposes that the maximum size of aircraft carriers be reduced from 25,000 to 25,000 tons and their age extended from 20 to 26 years. Aircraft carriers under 10,000 tons would be included in the total tonnage for this type of vessel instead of being classed with smaller warships.

Regarding cruisers, the British propose to reduce their fleet to 50, totaling 339,000 tons, saying that "final arrangement will be governed by decisions of the conference regarding limitation of size and units."

The suggestion proposes that the maximum tonnage of eight-inch cruisers remain at 10,000, while smaller cruisers be limited to 6,000 or 7,000 tons, and that only a fixed proportion of smaller cruisers could be built up to that limit. The proposal sets the life of cruisers at 20 years.

DESTROYER LEADERS

Destroyer leaders would be limited to 1,850 tons and destroyers themselves to 1,500. Their maximum guns would be of five-inch caliber.

"The present British building program for destroyers is for 200,000 tons ultimately," the statement declared, "but this can be reduced if the programs of other powers are reduced."

The final proposal was that auxiliary vessels not included in previous categories should be specified by each government by publication of annual lists of vessels of this class in commission as laid down.

STIMSON PROPOSALS

Stimson's proposals, revealed last night in a statement to the press, were, briefly, as follows:

Immediate parity of Britain and America, with gross tonnage of 1,200,000 apiece.

Reduction of the tonnage differences in the cruiser fleets to 12,000, in favor of Britain. America would have 18 large 8-inch gun cruisers, Britain 15, but Britain would have more of the smaller 6-inch gun types. Each country would have the option of duplicating the other's cruiser fleet.

Reduction of battleship fleets by 1931, equality of tonnage in destroyers and aircraft carriers, and in submarines the lowest tonnage possible.

Maintenance of the 5-5-3 battleship ratio with Britain cutting its fleet from 20 to 15, the United States from 18 to 15 and Japan from 10 to nine.

BOY WHO SHOT ORTIZ RUBIO COMMUNIST

Flores Admits Allegiance To 'Red' Cause; Act Laid To Break With Soviet

International News Service.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 7.—Daniel Flores, youthful Mexican, who shot and severely wounded President Pascual Ortiz Rubio a few hours after his inauguration, has acknowledged his allegiance to the Communist cause, it was reported here today.

While previously Flores stoutly maintained he had attempted to assassinate the President for purely personal reasons, it is now reported the act was a result of Senor Ortiz Rubio's initiative in the rupture of diplomatic relations between this country and Soviet Russia.

Mexican newspapers stress the fact that Charcos, State of San Luis Potosi, which is Flores' home town, is a hotbed of communism.

A second operation upon the President was necessary yesterday. It was a minor affair, being merely the removal of a bone splinter from the President's jaw and he came out of the anesthetic in good condition.

INJURED RECOVER

Dona Josefina Ortiz Rubio, the President's wife, and Senorita Maria Roch, his niece, and the others who suffered minor injuries during the shooting, have virtually recovered.

Flores is now being held in the Santiago military prison, the scene of many executions of prisoners convicted of military offenses.

A number of suspects have been rounded up by the police for questioning.

Secretary of the Interior Portes Gil, acting as head of the government pending the recovery of the president, announced the attempted assassination had resulted in no disturbances or ill-effects anywhere in Mexico.

PONDER FLORES STATUS

The authorities are faced with the problem of deciding what disposition should be made of Flores' case.

Although Flores is a civilian, the general sentiment is that he should be tried by a military tribunal, inasmuch as his act could easily be classed as treason partly because it was against the president and partly because it was committed in the vicinity of the National Palace which is under military guard.

PRISON HEAD ON WATCH FOR RIOT

Ex-Colonel in Charge at Mutinous Canon City; Hunt Hidden Explosives

CANON CITY, Col., Feb. 7. (AP.)—Under the stern discipline of Col. Patrick J. Hamrock, military dictator, a feverish search was conducted by guards today for a quantity of nitroglycerine and three revolvers reported hidden by convicts in the Colorado State Penitentiary held in preparation for another attempted prison break.

Two convicts who furnished information concerning an alleged plot to blow up the prison were removed to a cell in the Fremont County Jail to prevent possible reprisals against them by other prisoners.

SEARCH PRISON

While guards combed the penitentiary for the explosives and firearms reported to have been smuggled inside the walls, Col. Hamrock began a hasty reorganization of the prison system along strict military lines, determined to prevent any possibility of a mutiny such as occurred last October with the loss of 13 lives.

Names of the convicts who reported the presence of the nitroglycerine and revolvers in the prison were withheld. The minimum sentence of one of the men is said to have expired February 3, discounting the theory that his statements were a scheme to win clemency. As he was held at the prison to await transfer to California on a minor charge, prison authorities said he could not hope to gain anything by giving inaccurate information.

The quest is a life and death matter to the prison population of 1,100 men — prisoners and guards.

BOARD REFUSES TO QUIT

The dictatorship was declared yesterday by a harried state board of correction, which had just made a public statement refusing to comply with a demand by Gov. William H. Adams that it resign. Its edict of military rule in the walled city said that, while Warden Crawford would retain his post, Col. Hamrock would have entire charge of the guards and prisoners.

Rising from the hospital bed, where he was recuperating from a three-week illness, Col. Hamrock entered the prison only a few hours after his appointment.

"I accept the task and responsibility," was his comment. "I alone am to be responsible for the behavior and discipline of the inmates under my charge. There will be no more riots."

JAPAN DISLIKES NAVAL RATIO

LONDON, Feb. 7.—(INS.)—Secretary Stimson's naval arms proposal was received glumly by the Japanese delegates, who have been working for a 10-10-7 battleship ratio instead of the 5-5-3 basis, retention of which is favored by both the Stimson and MacDonald "suggestions."

The Japanese issued a stereotyped statement calling Stimson's proposal a "step forward."

Dino Grandi, chief of the Italian delegation, on the other hand, received the Stimson statement with "extreme gratification."

"The statement can be said to be the most important step yet taken to speed up the work of the conference," Grandi said. "While it does not directly affect Italy's attitude at the conference, it promises to help things along."

Premier Andre Tardieu, of France, who returned to Paris this morning for the week-end, declined to make any statement, but it is understood the French are rather nettled over the program, interpreting it as an attempt to force them into an agreement which does not serve their best interests.

One French delegate took occasion to remind the press that "this is a five-power conference, not a three."

Weather Conditions.

A low pressure area is centered over Eastern Ontario this morning and extends southward to another center south of the Florida peninsula. The southern center is causing moderately heavy rain over Central and Southern Florida, while the northern center is producing cloudy weather over the entire northeastern portion of the country, and only light snowfall over the lake regions and eastward to the coast. Another low in the far Northwest is causing cloudy weather there, and rain or snow over the northwestern states.

High pressure, centered over the Rocky Mountain states is causing clear skies over that section and the southern plains and West Gulf states. It is also responsible for falling temperatures west of the Mississippi. There will be a drop in temperature over this section to below freezing tonight, but no severely cold weather is indicated for the next few days.

River Conditions.

The rivers are falling. Stage at Franklin is 1.9 feet; Lock No. 7, 16.5; Pittsburgh, 14.3; Dam No. 4, 11.5; Dam No. 5, 12.7; Dam No. 9, 12.0, and Dam No. 12, 10.4. The dams are down.

Texas Republican To Get House Seat

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—A House Elections Committee reported today it was unanimously in favor of giving Harry M. Wurzbach (Rep.), the seat now held by Representative Augustus McCloskey (Dem.), from the Fourteenth Texas District.

HOOVER'S FINAL NAVAL OFFER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—(INS.)—The Stimson cruiser proposal announced in London was regarded in administration circles here today as President Hoover's absolute minimum offer to the British.

That it will be acceptable to Great Britain was believed to be virtually certain. Although it means abandonment of construction of five 10,000-ton cruisers carrying eight-inch guns, of the 15 cruiser program, Stimson's analysis of Anglo-American cruiser tonnage figures, if it is accepted, shows that the United States achieves within 12,000 tons parity on a global tonnage basis, if not ship for ship parity.

While naval officers of the big navy group believe the arrangement, if put in treaty form and adopted, will still leave Great Britain mistress of the seas, they are inclined to get some measure of comfort out of it because "it is no worse."

Believed Lost, 11 Fishermen Rescued

VIGO, Spain, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—After being given up for lost, 11 members of the fishing smack Maria Del Carmen arrived here today aboard the Terceira Rupublica, which rescued them at great risk during the latter days of January, when their own craft sank.

Two Mexican Mayors Slain by Assassin

TAMPICO, Mexico, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Both the incoming and outgoing mayors of the town of Villa Altamira, near here, were assassinated Wednesday night as they celebrated inauguration of the new municipal government.

The two men were at a party given in their honor and in honor of the newly-elected beauty queen for a forthcoming carnival when an unidentified man in the party opened fire with a pistol, shooting both.

The assassin escaped, and the mayors were brought toward Tampico in an automobile, the outgoing mayor, Martin Martinez, dying en route. The incoming mayor, Ciro Rodriguez, died soon after reaching this city.

Liquor Caused Death, Bootlegger Guilty

MERCED, Cal., Feb. 7.—(AP.)—In what is belived the first verdict of its kind in California, George Hodder, Oakland bootlegger, last night was convicted of manslaughter because his liquor caused the death of Roy D. Ebert, dairyman. Hodder will be sentenced Monday.

DRYS TO MODIFY JONES LAW

American people brought about its destruction, he said:

"The result is a sinister omen for the Republican party, even in this day of its great power. The Whig party perished and the Republican party came into being. I say it with regret, but I say it as a necessary warning, that the Republican party cannot longer afford to sell its soul to the fanatical drys, and if does and thus becomes the party of prohibition, it may have a like fate."

Beck asserted the individualistic traits of the American people were asserting themselves in a revolt against the dry law.

Beck cited Edmund Burke's statement that "You cannot indict a people."

"He might have gone further and said that you cannot indict a substantial portion of the people," said Beck. "The fact that, after 10 years of enforcement, with millions of dollars and a ghastly sacrifice of many lives, the prohibition law is still largely unenforced, damns it beyond any defense."

He attacked the "home brew plea" of Representative Fort (Rep.), of New Jersey, ex-secretary of the Republican National Committee and friend of President Hoover.

"I am not convinced that the cause of temperance would be promoted by making every householder a vintner and every cellar a brewery," said Beck. "I believe that the greatest evil of our age has been the destruction of the home."

TAXIS TO BEGIN NIGHT SERVICE

cycle policemen who have been assigned to strike duty in the downtown area were given reliefs today and ordered to report for night duty shortly after 5 p. m.

An attack by strike sympathizers on Adolph Cook, 29, of 706 West North avenue, and his brother, Paul, of Youngstown, O., formerly employed by the Yellow Cab Company, caused a riot call to be sent in from West North avenue and Reddour street today. The trouble was over when police arrived, they reported. The two brothers said they had been beaten as they came out of a barber shop in Reddour street.

Acting Lieutenant Hugh Lavery and Deputy Sheriff Michael Keogh placed four men under arrest at Grant street and Liberty avenue on suspicious person charges after they are alleged to have insulted and spat at John Thompson, 30, of 2 Ross street, a Yellow cab driver, as he cruised by. The four, when arraigned at Central Police Station, said they were William Rodman, 36, of 36 Coleman street; Fred Miller, 32, of 3 Blake street; Edward Malbuns, 35, of 3146 Mt. Hope road, and J. T. Donahue, 29, of 141 Noble avenue.

DRIVER HURT BY BOTTLE

Thomas Hoover, 30, of Irwin avenue, accused of hurling a bottle at a taxicab driven by J. Shuback, 33, a new driver, at Oliver avenue and Grant street, was discharged by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Police Court this morning when the driver failed to identify him. Shuback was cut on the face by flying glass.

There were two reports of drivers attacked yesterday. John Pharr, 21, of Uniontown, said he was attacked and beaten in his cab in Diamond street, and in front of St. Francis Hospital a driver and a guard were attacked but escaped serious injury.

Paul Reagon, 23, of 425 Taylor street, was arrested at Seventh avenue and William Penn way this morning, charged with being a suspicious person. He was accused by police of throwing a brick through a window of a taxicab driven by Martin O'Toole, 26, of 111 Bennett street. The driver's hand was cut by flying glass.

SAYS BERKEY URGED CLEANUP

Berkey, in 1928, had asked him to investigate a speakeasy known as "Duke's Place."

Graham's testimony dealt only with Berkey, and none of the other 14 defendants who are standing trial with the former jurist on charges of conspiring to violate the liquor laws.

Defense counsel aimed to prove by today's testimony that Berkey, far from being a conspirator, was victimized by Claude A. M. Welsh, government witness, who testified that he was a go-between for Berkey and bootleggers.

The jury will not be given the case until Tuesday, it was said. There is no session of the Federal Court Saturday, and Monday will be given over to testimony of character witnesses, the closing addresses and the judge's charge.

CHARGES DENIED

Victor Glessner, Harry Sellers, Ed Darr and Emmet Buckman, county employes, and John E. Custer, banker, all defendants, took the stand yesterday to deny any knowledge of or participation in the alleged liquor conspiracy. Ira Friedline, Somerset clerk of courts, told of an alleged threat made by a commonwealth witness against Glessner.

June E. Werner, Somerset prothonotary, together with numerous Somerset attorneys, testified that Welsh assured them that "this case was just a political scheme to get Judge Berkey."

Besides Judge Berkey, Foster Ziegler, James McIntyre, J. C. John Gress and John Hanlon are Tucker, who is ill; Ed Sheeler, John Gress and John Hanlon are John Griffith, John Sherman, the other defendants, who had not yet testified.

LaGuardia and Brookhart To Clash in Dry Debate

International News Service.

CLEVELAND, Feb. 7.—Congressman Fiorello H. La Guardia, of New York, and Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, two of the nation's most colorful political figures in the raging congressional liquor war, will cross swords over prohibition enforcement in a debate at Public Hall here tonight.

The two champions of bitterly-opposed sides will argue for the benefit of an expected audience of more than 3,000 on the question, "Can Prohibition Be Enforced?"

La Guardia, the militant and outspoken critic of prohibition, will take the negative. He has promised an expose of liquor enforcemnt which both camps are awaiting with keen interest.

Pre-debate intimations have been that La Guardia plans to lift the lid on alleged corruption in high Washington offices attributable to prohibition. The New Yorker has said that he plans to make his debate here the springboard for the attack on the liquor laws which are to come up for hearing in Washington next week.

Brookhart, Iowa individualist, will take the affirmative of the question tonight.

Girl Battles Choppers As Last Cedar Is Felled

SHEPHERDSTOWN, W. Va., Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Clasping her arms about the last of the big cedars marked for cutting on property purchased from Miss Sue Lemen, Miss Violet Dandridge had to be forcibly removed before the cutters could fell the tree. The trees are being cut to protect apple orchards against "cedar rust."

Both women have protested vigorously against the state program, although it has been given the approval of the courts.

Officers reported that they arrested Miss Dandridge twice for interfering with the work of the cutters. They reported that she placed herself in front of the trees and defied the axes of the choppers. Officers also said Miss Dandridge confiscated some of the tools and carried them to her home, several miles away, where they were later found.

She was released after the first arrest, and a justice of the peace dismissed her case when she was brought before him the second time.

Friends of Miss Dandridge brought her hot food during the day while she remained on the scene of the cutting. Many of the trees felled were topped by American flags, placed there by the owners in a vain effort to discourage the cutters. The Lemen property was purchased a few days ago by the Dandridge family.

RICH FRIEND IS 'DEATH VALLEY SCOTTY'S GOLD MINE'

PARTNERSHIP OF DESERT REVEALED

Chicago Millionaire Backs Odd Character 30 Years As Hobby—Lode Is Myth

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—The mysterious desert "gold mine" of fabulous wealth which western legend for years has credited to the ownership of "Death Valley Scotty," picturesque survivor of the bonanza days, floated off into the land of burst bubbles today as the result of a "confession" by Scotty himself.

At the same time Scotty admitted that a recent report that he had lost $6,000,000 in the stock market didn't have as much solid reality about it as some people thought, although he did say that he was broke, washed up and cleaned out as the result of security speculation.

For 40 years Scotty, whose real name is Walter Scott, has lived the life of an uncrowned king in the barren Southern California desert. The story that he had a hidden gold mine in the desert gained wide credence from the spectacular fashion in which he made excursions into the outer world, spending money lavishly.

'AIN'T NO GOLD MINE'

"This fictive cloud of wealth he dissipated here last night with the simple statement that "thar ain't no gold mine, and thar never was."

At the same time he asserted that his source of money had been A. M. Johnson, millionaire retired insurance man from Chicago.

Johnson, Scotty's close friend, was revealed as his chief benefactor. The firm of Johnson and Scott now has under construction a $2,000,000 mansion in Death Valley. Scotty said he didn't want to live in a house "with all them gadgets on it anyway."

WON HEALTH IN DESERT

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—A. M. Johnson, the "human gold mine" described by "Death Valley Scotty," is a multi-millionaire Chicago financier. His partnership with "Scotty" began nearly 30 years ago. Mr. Johnson had been injured in a train wreck and was in poor health when "Scotty" came to him seeking a backer for one of his desert projects. Johnson, impressed by the prospector's vivid story of the desert and its hidden treasures, put up the money and later went West for his health.

He and Scotty met again and formed the friendship during which the capitalist learned to love Death Valley, regained his health under the desert sun, and cemented the partnership with the eccentric prospector. Now a $2,000,000 "desert shack" is nearing completion in Death Valley where Johnson and Scotty "won't have to pay any rent," as the prospector says.

Johnson is educating Scotty's young son and supplies the old prospector with everything he needs in return for the health and happiness Scotty found for him in Death Valley.

MELLON, FISHER HOLD PARLEY

HARRISBURG, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Gov. John S. Fisher revealed today that W. L. Mellon, former Republican state chairman, called on him last night for a discussion of the gubernatorial political situation in Pennsylvania.

The governor was uncommunicative about the discussion, except to say, "the situation is as much up in the air as it ever was." Mr. Mellon, according to the executive, reported to him the results of the two conferences held at Washington with Senator Joseph R. Grundy concerning the slating of a Republican candidate by the state organization for governor to run at the May primaries.

It was later said in official quarters that Mellon expressed to the Governor fear of a wide-open split in the organization, due to the demands of the Philadelphia "war board" for the slating of Francis Shunk Brown, former attorney general, unless a settlement of the question is reached in the near future.

The Governor announced he, in company with Hubert Work, former Republican national chairman, intend to take a three-weeks' trip to the West Indies and the Panama Canal Zone, embarking from New York on February 22.

3 BUSINESSMEN HELD FOR COURT IN ARSON

Suspects Arrested After Oil Traces Are Found In Burned Buildings

Three Penn avenue businessmen, charged with arson, were held for court by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg in Central Police Court this morning. They are Joseph Selvaggio, 36, of 5236 Gertrude street, and Anthony Sunsere, 33, of 1521 Alton street, proprietors of the Fruit Exchange Restaurant at 2029 Penn avenue, and Vincenzo Esposito, 45, of 6012 Station street, who conducts a wholesale and retail grocery store at 2027 Penn avenue.

The men were arrested by city detectives in connection with fire which occurred in their stores at 1 a. m. January 26. The investigators believed the fire of incendiary origin. When firemen extinguished the flames, they found six empty cans which had contained oil in the basement of the restaurant, a barrel, partly filled with oil, and the tops of the six cans, in the basement of the grocery store.

Deputy fire chief testified that he made a thorough investigation after the fire and detected a very strong ordor of oil in both cellars. The damage to the store was estimated at $3,000.

It was learned, it was testified, that the grocery store was insured for $7,000 and that the restaurant, which also contained a sub-postoffice, was insured for $7,000.

The three defendants denied knowledge of the fire. The restaurant owners told the court that they did not know how the barrels got into their cellar and the other man admitted the barrel was his but denied knowing it contained oil.

TAFT RESTS, CONTINUES TO GAIN

Doctors Maintain Vigilance Despite Good Night of Sleep Aided by Medicine

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Much sleep, partially induced by medicines and more food, had put William Howard Taft in better condition today, but his physicians did not relax vigilance.

Attendants at the home said the former chief justice and president of the United States spent a "very satisfactory night." Mr. Taft, it was said, went to sleep last night about 8 o'clock and rested unusually well throughout the remainder of the night.

His physicians, in an official bulletin said that he was continuing to improve. It was added that Mr. Taft was taking more nourishment and was comfortable.

BROTHER ARRIVES

The attending physicians, although encouraged by the former chief justice's improvement, would not commit themselves as to whether this change in his condition would continue. They were confident, however, that for the present, at least, the difficulties encountered over having him take nourishment were passed.

Meanwhile, members of the family were planning to come to Washington. Horace Taft, a brother, arrived early today from Watertown, Conn., and Robert A. Taft, one of his sons, was to arrive later in the day. The other son, Charles P. Taft, and the daughter, Mrs. Helen Taft Manning, were expected later in the week.

Mrs. Taft, following the custom she has observed since returning with her husband from Asheville, N. C., took a brief drive during the morning. Horace Taft also left the house after speaking to his brother for a few minutes and was gone for some time.

TAKE FOOD AND SLEEPS

Some difficulty had been experienced by the physicians in feeding the patient, but he took food more easily yesterday afternoon, and after long sleeps, encouraged by the medicines administered, all bulletins that came from the sick room were favorable.

During one of his periods of wakefulness, Mr. Taft recognized and spoke to two of the house servants. He asked for "Nellie," as he calls Mrs. Taft, and she came into the room and chatted with him for some time.

Late in the day, his doctors issued a bulletin describing his condition as showing greater improvement than at any time since he returned to Washington on Tuesday from Asheville, North Carolina.

PRESIDENT EAGER

This bulletin, as are all that come from the sick room, was delivered first to the White House which transmitted it to the various news agencies. President Hoover has been keenly interested in watching the progress of his old friend.

Few callers besides the President have been permitted to see the patient, but the associate justices of the Supreme Court, with whom he worked for so long, and his numerous other friends have kept in close touch with his condition.

The House today adopted a resolution expressing its profound regret over the illness of the prominent American. A resolution along the same lines was adopted yesterday by the Senate. The House resolution was offered by Representative Bankhead (Dem.), Alabama. It expressed "a hope and prayer" that the Chief Justice may soon be restored to health.

BEEBE ORDERS RAID FIGHT QUIZ

Police Inspector Albert Beebe announced today that the Police Trial Board would inquire into the fighting which followed the raid of a club at 1341 Fifth avenue early yesterday.

Beebe said all the officers on the raid would be called to determine whether Constable Jack Schneider, Republican chairman of the First Ward; Ike Pollas, former constable, and James Kelly, political follower of Schneider's, were arrested and later released without explanation.

Patrolman John Nowack was beaten up in the fighting between police and a dozen customers of the club, where police said liquor was sold.

3 SEIZED, HELD IN 'BOOKIE' RAID

A fully equipped race track booking establishment at 410 Third avenue fell today before a raid by county detectives, who entered the place while business was being conducted. A large quantity of booking paraphernalia was confiscated and three men, in the place at the time, were arrested.

Henry Stein, detectives say, is the proprietor of the establishment. Frank Miller and Charles Brown, giving their address as 410 Third avenue, were taken into custody with him. According to County Detective Edward Weber, Miller was writing race entries when they entered the room.

The men were given an immediate hearing before Alderman George J. Anderson, who ordered them held for court under $1,000 bail, charged with maintaining a gambling house.

The office was filled, detectives testified, with long desks for the use of customers. Race form pads, checks and cancelled orders were confiscated. The orders are said to have ranged in amounts from $5 to $1,000. No visitors were in the room at the time.

County detectives who participated in the raid are Frank Ritz, John Geisler, David Carlan and Weber.

Dog Better Fed Than Family, Man Jailed

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Herman Wagner was very good to his dog, his wife complained yesterday to Judge Lupe, but of very little help to his wife and five children.

She told the court Herman readily bought meat for the hound, but refused to provide for the home folks.

Judge Lupe fined Wagner $100 and costs, which he could not pay. As they were leading him away to serve out the fine in jail, he called back to Mrs. Wagner:

"Take good care of the dog, Lizzie."

HUGHES TO WIN SENATE O. K.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—(INS.)—Charles Evans Hughes will be confirmed by the Senate next week as chief justice of the United States, administration leaders declared today, despite the dramatic demand of Senator Cole Blease (Dem.), of South Carolina, that his nomination be returned to President Hoover.

The plea of Blease that the Senate simultaneously adopt a resolution requesting President Hoover to reappoint William Howard Taft likewise will be ignored, it was said. So too will Blease's sensational charges that there was "something crooked" in the resignation of Taft and the prompt appointment of Hughes. Both Republican and Democratic leaders privately deplored Blease's speech, but declined comment.

Rumors were current in the Capitol that Taft had given up his post reluctantly. It was said he had been influenced by the members of his immediate family to retire because his continued absence from the court was preying on his mind, retarding his recovery.

The Senate Judiciary Committee will meet next Monday to consider Hughes' appointment as Chief Justice. A favorable report has been predicted by Senator Norris (Rep.), of Nebraska.

WASSON CASE NEARS END

Members of the special committee of the State Bar holding the hearing in the disbarment proceedings against former Judge Henry G. Wasson expected to complete the testimony late today, they stated when a recess was taken at noon.

It was explained that the great mass of documentary evidence accruing when the case was before the courts has been submitted. Wasson and Attorney George H. Calvert are charged with mismanagement of the affairs of Eleanor Davidson, widow of Frederick Davidson, Pittsburgh steel man. Calvert, who is said to be suffering a nervous breakdown in a New York sanitarium, will be given a hearing at a later date.

SPROUL FREED UNDER BAIL

Evangelist John W. Sproul was at liberty under $3,500 bail today, pending a hearing February 19 before Justice of the Peace Richard P. McCarthy, Millvale, charged with giving three worthless checks, each for $1,000, to P. J. Vogel, of 301 Colton avenue, Millvale.

Sproul was arrested as he was about to begin his sermon Wednesday night from the stage of the old Alhambra Theater, Penn avenue, East Liberty, by Constable E. P. Murray. He was in custody for half an hour until he could give bond before Justice of the Peace George B. Shields, of Wilkinsburg.

Vogel, a former railroader, who suffered a broken back four years ago, charges that he loaned Sproul $5,000 to build a "glory barn" in Parnassus and that Sproul gave him the alleged bad checks in payment.

Lindy to Try Night Flight In Glider Experiment

LINDBERGH CAMP, TEHACHAPI MOUNTAINS, Cal., Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh will resume his glider tests today and may attempt a brief night flight.

Night flying will be necessary in the proposed attempt of Hawley Bowlus to better the world glider record of 14 hours 45 minutes now held in Germany.

Bowlus indicated it would be better to start the record attempt in the dark to have daylight at the finish.

During a visit to the United States meteorological station in the town of Lebec earlier in the day, Lindbergh almost disrupted Lebec school activities. A pupil, late for classes, observed Lindbergh going into the weather station and dashed into the school room with the news.

Despite the protests of Mrs. Rebecca Otis, principal of the school, the 21 pupils rushed out to the weather station for a look at Lindy.

Unaware of the stir he had caused, Lindbergh remained in the station until Mrs. Otis approached and explained that the children would not return to school until they had seen him.

Lindbergh good-naturedly stepped outside and spoke to the children, after which they returned to their classes.

Lindbergh yesterday took off in a Bowlus glider and remained aloft 21 minutes, 10 seconds. Observers said he flew about 15 miles.

CAPE TOWN, Union of South Africa, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—The calm atmosphere of the Senate here was broken today by a scene reminiscent of the boxing ring when Senator T. Boydell, former minister of labor, knocked T. S. Warwick, a member of the opposition, unconscious with a blow on the chin.

The incident took place when Boydell asked Warwick to apologize for an alleged blow Warwick struck Boydell at an election meeting in Durban.

Detectives Here Welcome Outside Dry Raiders

Beaver County detectives are welcome to raid alleged law violators in Allegheny County if they so desire, Chief of County Detectives George W. Murren declared today.

A complaint had been made to Murren that Beaver County sleuths and state police had raided the Hill Top Inn on the Broadhead road near the Beaver County line, Wednesday.

"So far as I am concerned, Allegheny County residents will get no sympathy if their places are visited by detectives from nearby counties," said Murren. "All we are concerned about is the enforcement of the law."

In the raid Mary Campbell was arrested as the alleged proprietor. She gave $500 bail for court before Justice of the Peace M. J. Kane, of Aliquippa.

Beaver County detectives reported confiscating two slot machines and a punch board in the place. Many complaints from persons living near the Allegheny-Beaver County line had been received, they said.

RADIO SEARCH FOR WILKINS SPREADING

Fears for Explorer in Ice Sea Grow as Tenth Day Passes Without Answer

By VICTOR OLSEN

Wireless Operator Aboard the S. S. Melville on the Wilkins Hearst Antarctic Expedition

DECEPTION ISLAND, Antarctic, Feb. 7. (Via S. S. Melville and KUP, San Francisco Examiner Wireless Station.)—We are marshaling our strength here today and preparing to launch a vigorous and widespread search for the steamship Scoresby and Capt. Wilkins, missing now for 10 days and nights.

What has increased our fears more than anything is that the last time the Scoresby made a trip South her radio was received very strong. We had hoped that this time the Scoresby may only have developed radio trouble and will answer as soon as repairs are made, but as day by day goes by our worry increases.

READY TO START SEARCH

The Scoresby, with Capt. Wilkins and the entire personnel of his expedition aboard, is somewhere in that sea of ice to the south of us.

I am to confer with the captain of the whaler Melville and ask his opinion as to the best way to launch an expedition south. We are prepared to send a spare whaling vessel out immediately to start the search, once our plans are formulated.

There are two whaler factories, Svenloyn and Maudie, lying south of Deception Island. Inquiries show that they have not heard from the Scoresby.

Capt. Wilkins had taken a general course south when he failed to find a takeoff point for the proposed Ross Sea flight across the polar gap.

Weather conditions here at Deception Island have been good, but sudden storms are prevalent in the ice sea to the south.

CONFIDENT OF SAFETY

PARIS, Feb. 7.—(Universal)—"No matter if Wilkins' radio is damaged, and even if his ship, the William Scoresby, is wrecked, he should be able to make Deception Island in the ship's small boats. He could exist there until rescue, but I have a hunch he is safe and in no danger."

This was the statement of Jean Charcot, noted French explorer, and friend of Sir Hubert Wilkins, whose mysterious silence in South Polar regions has been disturbing friends for more than a week. Charcot, at his Neuilly home, said:

"I don't think hope for Wilkins' safety should be abandoned. I know the region well, and believe he will be able to pull through safely."

LEIBER SPEAKS AT DUQUESNE

Fritz Leiber, Shakespearian dramatist, spoke to an audience of more than 500 in the Duquesne University Campus Theater yesterday afternoon as the guest of the school of theater arts and dramatic literature. In addition to giving a talk on the study of Shakespeare to the group of teachers and students, Mr. Leiber inspected the Campus Theater and discussed with the Very Rev. M. A. Hehir, president of the university, the prominent place the theater arts have always held in the curriculum at Duquesne.

Dr. Clinton E. Lloyd, dean of the school of theater arts and dramatic literature, introduced Mr. Leiber. In pointing out the influence Leiber has had upon the Shakespearian stage, Dr. Lloyd indicated the necessity for a correct interpretation of Shakespeare's works.

Endurance Flier Fined $250 For Liquor

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Loren Mendell, former co-holder of the world endurance flight record, pleaded guilty in Municipal Court to possession of liquor and was fined $250 or sentenced to alternative of 25 days in jail. Mendell was released on $500 bond and said he would pay the fine.

He was arrested January 6, when officers raided his apartment after being informed that liquor was stored there. Mendell with Pete Reinhart, last summer flew 236 hours to establish an endurance record which was exceeded later by two St. Louis aviators who remained aloft more than 400 hours.

JOYCE DIVORCE HINTS BIGAMY

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Depositions obtained in New York by attorneys for James Stanley Joyce, fourth husband of Peggy Hopkins Joyce, have been filed in circuit court to support Joyce's charge that his second wife, Nellie M. Joyce, was never legally divorced before her marriage to him.

Mrs. Joyce is suing him for divorce, charging cruelty. The depositions are in connection with the wealthy lumberman's cross bill.

The testimony in the depositions made by acquaintances of Mrs. Joyce is to the effect that she was still a legal resident of New York when she won a divorce from Ramon M. Vail, in Miami, Fla., April 30, 1926.

DENISON FIGHTS LIQUOR CHARGE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—A demurrer has been filed attacking the validity of the indictment charging Representative Denison of Illinois and John Layne, his former secretary, with possessing intoxicating liquor.

The brief, filed by attorneys for the two, contends that the indictment returned by a District of Columbia grand jury is so vague that a judgment returned upon it would not protect the defendants from another prosecution for the same offense.

It also set forth that the indictment did not specify the kind or quantity of liquor it charged was found in a trunk in Denison's office in the House office building. The demurrer added that there was no definition of time or place or how the alleged offense was committed or how he came into possession of the liquor he was charged with having.

The contention also was raised that while the indictment charged the two with possessing liquor, it did not show the acts of either or both of the defendants specifically constituting possession.

The demurrer added that the true bill "alleges commission of distinct and separate offenses by different defendants in one and the same charge, and does not allege that said acts were done jointly or that defendants acted in concert."

Denison and Layne were indicted recently and gave bond for their appearance in court.

The bureau announced its survey indicated 78 per cent of the farmers on the Pacific Coast own radios and listen in on market broadcasts.

REID'S TELLER FLIGHT BALKED

NOME, Feb. 7.—(Universal)—Unfavorable weather off Cape North, Siberia, has prevented T. M. (Pat) Reid, flight commander of the Aviation Corporation's Elelson expedition, from leaving for Teller to take on a load of gasoline for the planes stationed at the motorship Nanuk.

Meanwhile a crew of 10 is still digging for the bodies of Carl Ben Eielson and Earl Borland in the snow near their wrecked plane, 90 miles southeast of the Nanuk.

When Reid makes his dash to Teller for gasoline he will carry with him Olaf Swenson, head of the company that owns the fur trading motorship and his daughter, Marion, 17. Both have been marooned on the ice-bound ship three months.

GIRL GIVEN LIFE FOR THEFT

By FLETCHER ROBERTSON,
Universal Service

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Through the tiny gridironed windows of a prison cell, Ruth St. Clair looked at the outside world and wondered today.

She looked at organized society carry on its business methodically, and wondered if she would again be a competent part of that society.

For yesterday the pretty 29-year-old Brooklyn woman was sentenced to serve the balance of her natural life in prison. She was the first New York woman ever to be branded as a habitual criminal under the Baumes law and sentenced to life imprisonment.

In 1920 she stole two dresses; in 1924 she stole a coat; in 1926 she stole a second coat and in 1929 she stole two coats and a dress from a Broadway department store.

And for committing these felonies, Ruth St. Clair must pay the state of New York with her services for the balance of her life.

In each of the cases the young woman had pleaded guilty.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Feb. 7.—(AP.)—With his clothing blazing, Elwood Smith, of Ridgewood, Plains Township, prevented a probable explosion in the Peerless Powder Company mills at Suscon, near Moosic.

Smith, who works in the black powder mills, was throwing an electric switch when a spark ignited black powder particles on his clothing. In an instant he was a sheet of flame, but he ran out of the mill and rolled in the snow in an effort to put out the flames. Other employes who saw the blazing man dash out ran to his assistance. Smith was seriously burned about the back, arms and face, but doctors at a Pittston hospital expect him to recover.

JAILED IN PLOT TO SLUR GIRL

BOSTON, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Allan E. Burke, 25, of Brookline, former Harvard student, was arrested late last night on a warrant charging him with an attempt to extort $5,000 from Donald McKay Frost on threat of ruining the reputation and social standing of his debutante daughter, Miss Mary Ryerson Frost.

Burke was questioned this week following an investigation by police and a private detective agency of threatening telegrams and letters sent the Frost family last month.

Police alleged that Burke had been identified by a telegraph operator at an exclusive hotel as the man who sent a telegram January 25, signed "X" to the Frosts after a previous demand for $5,000 saying "last chance—tonight between 8 and 9—newspapers are ready for the story."

HORNE'S 81st Anniversary Sale begins TOMORROW

THIS is an invitation to EVERYBODY, Everywhere, to join us, beginning tomorrow and continuing through the following Saturday, in the commemoration of the 81st Birthday of the Joseph Horne Co., which will be observed in a manner worthy of the occasion.

The entertainment and favors will be in the form of lovely, wanted new Spring merchandise, typical of everything Horne's stands for in style and quality, offered at unmatchable Anniversary Sale prices.

The date has been advanced two weeks, because of the pronounced early interest, this year, in new Spring fashions, due to the radical style changes which affect the entire feminine wardrobe.

Every department is represented in the Sale and every ordinary want anticipated, so that shoppers may plan to supply practically all of their personal and household needs, from top to bottom of the store, at Anniversary savings.

The Sale beginning on Saturday, as it does this year, permits parents, teachers, office people and others for whom Saturday is a particularly convenient shopping day, to attend the first day. Record crowds, therefore, are expected tomorrow. Those who can come in the morning should do so.

The Basement has been pressed into service to accommodate the overflow shoppers and some of the more popular Anniversary items from all over the store will be duplicated there on sales squares and tables for quick service.

Come!

HEIRESS-BRIDE SPURNED, CLAIM

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Failure of the runaway marriage of Natalie Guggenheim, 18, and Thomas Gorman, which ended in the signing of the annulment papers, was due to the young Long Island real estate man's refusal to live with the heiress to the copper millions.

This was learned as State Supreme Court Justice Joseph Morschauser conducted a final hearing on the annulment action and signed the papers. He announced two weeks ago that he had granted the annulment.

Both Natalie's mother and Mrs. Patrick Gorman, mother of the bridegroom, testified they had urged the young people to live together, but Gorman had refused. He verified this testimony.

Previously it had been believed that conflict in religion—he is a Catholic and she subscribes to the Jewish faith—was the primary cause of the friction. It also was thought her parents were much opposed to the union.

Gorman, son of a former Long Island Railroad freight agent, and the daughter of Edmond A. Guggenheim, the copper king, were married last April 12 after several previous efforts to secure a license and minister had failed.

The young couple never lived together and two weeks after the marriage the bride sailed for Europe with her parents for a visit. During her absence abroad Gorman frequently was quoted as saying he hoped to get her parents' blessing and was building a home for his bride.

The annulment action was filed in Westchester Supreme Court last July.

OAKLAND SITE AGAIN SCORED

Pittsburgh's opportunity to become an outstanding convention center will be lost for years if the town hall is placed in Oakland, Harry Dangerfield, treasurer of Reymer & Brothers, Inc., and a director of the Chamber of Commerce, asserted today.

This opinion was offered in a statement issued through the Allegheny County Town Hall Association, which advocates a downtown location for the proposed $6,000,000 auditorium.

"Our principal handicap," Mr. Dangerfield said, "is the lack of a large centrally located colosseum capable of housing the attendance of a modern convention of any magnitude and conforming to the other requirements of exhibit space, junior assembly and committee rooms."

Hoover to Address Scouts on Birthday

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—The Boy Scouts of America announced today that President Hoover, as honorary president of their organization, will address the twentieth birthday party of the Boy Scouts in Washington on March 10. His address will be broadcast from coast to coast by both the National and Columbia systems.

Among the sponsoring committee for the birthday party are Vice President Curtis, Speaker Longworth, of the House, and Secretaries Mellon, Hurley, Hyde, Lamont and Davis, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Mother Sentenced For Forging Checks

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., Feb. 7.—Mrs. Winifred Dunham, of Coshocton, mother of two children, who admitted that she forged three checks for $465 to secure medical aid for her sick baby, was sentenced to one year in the Marysville women's reformatory today by Judge E. E. Lindsay. Relatives failed to make the checks good.

STOMACH UPSET

Get at the real cause. That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets help arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, people rarely suffer from indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Try Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain. All druggists, 15c, 30c and 60c. Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like.

SOUTH POLE AIR DRIFT CHARTED

This is the third article by Sir Douglas Mawson describing the accomplishments of his Antarctic research expedition. In the first two, he described the physical and geological aspects of a portion of the Antarctic coast, and refuted another explorer's claim that Enderby Land was not part of the Antarctic continent.

By SIR DOUGLAS MAWSON.
Commander of the British Australian and New Zealand Antarctic Research Expedition
Radio via London

S. S. DISCOVERY, Antarctica, Feb. 5.—(Delayed.)—A continuation of the summary of operations and facts ascertained while cruising in Antarctica waters disclosed that our physical observations which were chiefly meteorological in character are important and much has been accomplished.

In addition to a full program of general meteorological observations, special upper air records were made at frequent intervals by liberation of pilot balloons the movements of which were checked from the Discovery's deck by a recently devised mirror.

Thus, data were collected to a height of 50,000 feet, relating the inflow of air at high elevations over the lower Polar regions which counterbalances the outward movement of Polar air at the land surface and low elevations.

AIR DIRECTIONS

The upper air movements were found usually to be roughly from northwest to southeast. Useful figures relating to the temperature gradient in the free air obtained during airplane flights were found to be of a very similar order to that pertaining in lower latitudes.

It is interesting to note that the weather prevailing in the region visited is quite distinct from that featuring in similar latitudes further east, where the gales are southeast or even more southerly.

Off Enderby Land the gales are easterly or even north of east. The vicinity of Enderby Land is apparently a region subject to frequent recurring storms with a drive to the west or even south of west.

Under such conditions with the coast trending toward west-southwest, all the loose ice accumulated off the coast during the winter is driven west and south, thus the northern point of the territory of Enderby and Kemp Lands is kept swept partly clear of pack ice in the winter and is almost clear of it in summer.

SHELF OF ICE

As a result, only a narrow shelf of broken pack ice remains clinging to the land as it streams west under the influence of the prevailing westerly coastal current. The remnant of the pack ice is kept pressed against the coast by the great ocean swell from the region to the north, a region of continuous westerly winds, which are given full scope as they are unhampered by the outlying pack.

Evidently the same state of affairs prevailed more than a hundred years ago, when Kemp and Biscoe approached in open water within a few miles of land.

Clearly, the action of the wind and the swell along the coast is hampered by the existence of an endless row of icebergs, grounded in from 100 to 130 fathoms, on the submarine banks of the continental shelf.

Further east, in the region between MacRobertson Land and Baussberg, is an area of pack congestion, where there exists an extraordinarily heavy and extensive pack. The pack here is quite of a different order to that of the Ross Sea or the region south of Australia.

Other physical observations apart from several determinations of magnetic dip and total force, have related to atmospheric radiation and transparency of atmosphere. The latter were covered by pyro-heliometric measurements made by an actinometer investigation of the Enderby Land air, and by apparatus showing it to be quite free of dust.

Obituary

Colwell Funeral.

Funeral services for Evander N. Colwell, 83, who died Wednesday, will be held tomorrow afternoon in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Margaret Dunnmire, 7039 Hamilton avenue. He was a veteran employe of the American Steel and Wire Company, of Rankin. For the last 21 years he had been a member of the First Baptist Church, of Wilkinsburg. Beside Mrs. Dunnmire, he leaves a son, Robert Colwell, and a grandson.

COUNTY BRIDGE CONTRACT LET

The contract for the construction of the McKees Rocks-North Side Bridge has been awarded by the County Commissioners to the Fort Pitt Bridge Works. The contract was for $1,539,700, the largest of several contracts let by the commissioners at their meeting yesterday.

The commissioners also let a contract to the Vang Construction Company on its bid of $1,369,333 for work on the Ohio River Boulevard. Another contract amounting to $14,257 went to the Speaker Contracting Company for construction of the small Deer Creek bridge.

Contract for the sub-structure of the West End-North Side bridge was awarded to the Foundation Company over the protest of County Commissioner C. C. McGovern and that by the Dravo Contracting Company, contending that the Foundation Company had not complied with the specifications in not submitting a specimen of the granite to be used in the work.

The Foundation Company's bid was $734,880, approximately $20,000 lower than the Dravo bid.

GARBAGE FIRM PLEA DENIED

The American Reduction Company, which is being sued by the city of Pittsburgh for alleged overcharges of approximately $1,000,000 in the collection of garbage, lost a preliminary skirmish today in Common Pleas Court.

Judge James B. Drew dismissed the company's objections to the bill of complaint filed by former Controller Henry Oliver Evans. The company protested that Evans' charges were too general and vague and could not be answered specifically.

Judge Drew ordered the company to answer the complaint within 15 days. The company's objections were filed in the names of the estate of George H. Flinn, former owner of the company; George H. Flinn, Jr., and William F. Hill, C. R. McMillen and David O. Jones, directors.

GRANDMOTHER, 80, DRIVEN OUT

When Patrolman Raymond Lewis answered a call to the home of Steve Kovacs, 4310 Graphic street, last night, he found an 80-year-old woman and two children, partly clad, in the street, he testified in Morals Court today.

The two children of Kovacs, Helen, 14, and Louis, 13, told Magistrate T. D. Jones that their father came home drunk last night, beat their grandmother, felled their mother with his fist and drove three of them from home with a revolver.

Kovacs was held over until his wife is able to appear against him. She was recovering from her injuries today in her home, the magistrate was informed.

GLARING POST CARDS REPLACED

Delicate and highly atmospheric etchings and photographs will replace the penny picture post cards carrying local scenes in glaring colors, if the plans of the Allegheny County League of Women Voters are carried out. The new cards will be on sale at the annual banquet of the league Monday night in McCreery's, at which Grand Duchess Marie of Russia will be the honor guest.

The committee sponsoring the change says the new cards are being published "from a sense of civic pride," as a result of the league's objection to the city being represented in glaring colors on the cheaper cards. Mrs. Waldo Amos is chairman of the committee. The etchings and pictures to be reproduced on the cards are being contributed by prominent artists, including Edmund P. Metour, Charles Archer, O. C. Reiter and George Morse.

'LYRIC RACKET' MEN INDICTED

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—(INS.)—The "lyric racket," which originated in Chicago and made familiar by the man standing on the corner shouting "The words of the 100 most popular songs for a nickel," today had the dignity of two federal indictments, issued on complaint of the Music Publishers' Association and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Morris Shapiro and Samuel Cohen were the men indicted, charged with criminal violation of copyright laws.

Nathan Burkan, attorney for the association, said so great has been the success of the new business that Irving Berlin, Inc., alone had suffered a sales slump of 6,000 copies a day.

SACKETT WINS BERLIN PRESS

BERLIN, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Frederic M. Sackett, new American ambassador to Germany, won the German press by choosing newspaper men for his first German audience.

That is unusual procedure over here, and the Germans seemed to be captivated by his "jovial and amiable manner," as they phrased it.

"I'm a product of Kentucky," Sackett told them, "famous for its beautiful women, fine horses, good tobacco and—formerly—good whisky."

In a serious vein Sackett emphasized the American public's admiration for Germany's scientific and commercial comeback since the war. He pointed out that the achievements of Americans of German ancestry predisposed his countrymen to friendliness with the German people.

3 IN 100 FELONS FOUND NORMAL

DETROIT, Feb. 7. — (AP) — Startling results of scientific examination of the mentality of 100 convicted felons were announced from the bench in Records' Court here by Judge Thomas M. Cotter who for the last three months has been conducting a quiet investigation with the co-operation of a psychopathic clinic.

Of the 100 unselected felons, sent to the clinic without regard for sex, age or condition, reports submitted to Judge Cotter showed that only three had "no essential mental defects." Two were stated to be definitely insane, 33 were found to be feeble-minded, 25 were of inferior intelligence and the other 37 exhibited "deviations in personality," "handicapping adequate social adjustment."

The psychiatrists found that 73 of the convicted persons were "poor community risks," recommending penal imprisonment for 71 and hospitalization for two. Fifteen were reported to be "reasonably good community risks" and Judge Cotter accepted the scientists' conclusions by placing them on probation.

SUB DIVING BELL 'SAVES' CREW

KEY WEST, Fla., Feb. 7.—(AP)—The crew of the submarine S-4 was brought to the surface of the Gulf of Mexico in a diving bell designed by the Navy Department. The bell, similar to the O'Rourke bell, successfully operated last week, brought up the men from a depth of 70 feet.

The preliminary test with the Navy Department's apparatus, which was conducted in smooth water, was considered "most satisfactory" by officers of the expedition.

Adverse weather reports and rising seas caused officers of the salvage ship Falcon and the submarine S-4 to decide to return to the Key West base last night, abandoning for the week further operations with the escape and rescue devices.

In the operation yesterday the bell was lowered over the motor hatch of the submarine by the Falcon and the hatch opened by members of the submarine crew. The men entered the bell and were lifted to the surface to be taken

WIFE LOVES HER RUNAWAY MATE

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Feb. 7.—Under arrest in Detroit, Mich., on a charge brought by his wife, 25 years his senior, Christopher Rhoades, of the Uniontown district, has this assurance—his wife still loves him.

He has not been officially informed of that fact, but Mrs. Rhoades has made that assertion publicly and indicates that she will not press the prosecution.

It is alleged the husband forged Mrs. Rhoades' name to a $2,900 check.

"I love my husband. We were very true to each other. That is all I have to say," declared Mrs. Rhoades today in response to a telephone call from an interviewer. She added: "You can say I am 48 instead of 55 or 59, as reported."

The husband is 23.

Mrs. Rhoades said she expected everything to come out all right later. She would place no blame for the alleged forgery of her name to the large check.

FORGERY CHARGED

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 7.—Christopher Rhodes, 23, who says his only offense was flight from his wife to whom he has been wedded for seven years, is held in jail today as a fugitive from justice. Rhodes was arrested here on complaint of the wife that he left her at Uniontown, Pa., with $2,910 of her personal funds.

Police at Uniontown, hold a warrant, which they are forwarding. It charges forgery, setting forth that Rhodes signed his wife's name to a $2,910 check.

Rhodes told Detective Albert Ruth that "she gave me the money and got mad when I left her, that's all. I've been married to her seven years. She married me when I was 16 and I am tired of it."

POLICE STATION DEATH ACCIDENT

Injuries suffered on January 19, when he fell to the floor in Central Police Station, caused the death of Harry Rivers, 36, of 17 Isabella street, North Side, the same day, a coroner's jury under the direction of Coroner W. J. McGregor decided today when a verdict of accidental death was returned.

Rivers had been arrested a few hours before following an altercation with a street car conductor who said he became boisterous while riding the trolley. Prior to the inquest, J. C. Shipley, said to have been a friend of the victim, asked Coroner McGregor to conduct a special investigation into Rivers death because, he charged, he witnessed a man being beaten by an officer at Sixth and Liberty avenues. On the witness stand today Shipley admitted that he had mistaken the man for Rivers.

Before his death Rivers had been arraigned in Central Police Court and fined $25 or 30 days in jail on a disorderly conduct charge. A fractured skull was the immediate cause of death, the verdict stated.

SECRETARIES IN MEETING HERE

Salesmanship talks, a symposium and an address by J. D. Steele, of the Baltimore Association of Commerce, were to feature today's session of secretaries of chambers of commerce from cities of more than 300,000 population, in the Chamber of Commerce. The conference opened yesterday.

The secretaries will be guests of James Rea, president of the Chamber, at a banquet in the William Penn Hotel tonight.

Discussions yesterday were on problems which confront commerce organizations insofar as the upbuilding, retention and conservation of membership are concerned, and their ultimate reaction on community welfare.

At the afternoon session speakers were McLean E. Remelin, of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce; R. W. Christ, of Harrisburg, and Linwood B. Law, of Buffalo.

Flee Juvenile Home, Two Boys Retaken

Two boys in blue uniforms, hiking along the Pittsburgh-McKeesport boulevard at Lincoln place, former Hays Borough, told Motorcycle Patrolman Julius Bonetti today they had escaped from the Juvenile Detention quarters, in Forbes street, two hours before. They were taken to the South Side Police Station and authorities of the Juvenile Home notified.

KDKA—Famous Lovers. Bobby Burns and "Bonnie Jean."
The story of the greatest of all Scottish poets, Robert Burns, and his love for Jean Armour, will be dramatized. It was while Burns was a farmer in the lowland country long before he had been recognized as a poet that he met "Bonnie Jean." Armour. Before many months had passed, they were secretly married, but Jean's father, a well-to-do master mason, refused to accept the unsuccessful farmer as his son-in-law. Burns was disconsolate when Jean was ordered not to see him again.
He had booked passage for the West Indies when the success of his first volume of poetry caused him to regain hope. Then followed a triumphal tour of Scotland. Burns was made a literary lion and the country, too, was temporarily forgotten. Finally Burns grew weary of lowns and returned to his first love.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS
When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.
Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.
Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of good water.

Rehearse "Carmen"

The Alpha and Omega Opera Company Deluxe, incorporated under the laws of the State of Misapprehension and dedicated to the cultural uplift of the city, gather under the leadership of Deacon Simon Pure for a rehearsal of "Carmen."

The cultural transformation of the American people has reached a sputtering Mississippi town and has included the inner sanctum of the Alpha and Omega Social Club for Colored. The members of this distinguished body feel the urge for social uplift and convert the Alpha and Omega Pool and Billiard Parlor into a theater with the pool tables pinned together at one end as the foundations of a stage.

The old-fashioned minstrel show is discarded and the popular Jug Band is converted into an orchestra with the identical personnel and instruments but with a heavy veneer of dignity.

The love scenes lack nothing in realism until Hepatica Wump, Lady-of-the 250-pound wife whose wit and bearing are nothing to praise although her eyes comprehend quickly enough, bursts on to the scene.

The musical scores include a red hot syncopated arrangement of jazz, followed by the "Habanera," "Seguidilla" and "The Toreador's Song" from the opera.

The unusual feature of the playlets will be that after placing the principal characters in unusually perplexing situations, no solution to the problem will be given. Listeners are invited to write their solution and each week a well-known psychologist will tell what he considers the best answer to the situation.

The first of the series deals with a girl who on the eve of her engagement to be married discovers that her father faces a crisis, the outcome of which depends on her action.

"Flaxolyn Amazing Formula" Says Penna. Doctor

Secretary of Pennsylvania Doctors' Society Tells Plain Truths About Nervousness. Says Flaxolyn Helps to Build Rapid New Strength for Nervous, Weak, or Worn-Out People.

Dr. R. A. Stippich, 3543 Germantown Ave., Philadelphia

Sleep Soundly and Store Up New Vitality As Dr. Luntz's New Pleasant Herbal Flaxolyn Helps to Bring That Rich Sleep of Health.

"I am just going to give you an idea of the fascinating action of the nervous system," Dr. Stippich replied in answer to a question as to how the new vitaminized Flaxolyn could help strengthen shattered nerves.

"The nervous system is like the electric wiring of a building. People have nervous breakdowns, just like electric wiring systems have breakdowns.

"If the nerves are dulled or weakened, the BODY is in turn dulled and weakened. Thus, by harming the nervous system, you are hurting the progress of the body—muscularly, organically and mentally.

What Disturbs the Nervous System?

"Three things can disturb the nerves: (1) NERVE EXHAUSTION, which means that you are using up your supply of nerve energy. (2) NERVE DEPRESSION, which means you are depressing the nerve flow from the nerve centre to the vital organs, and (3) NERVE TENSITY, caused by overwork of the nervous system.

The Value of Good Sleep

"When we sleep, the nerve storage process is most active. Therefore sound sleep is of the UTMOST IMPORTANCE. A body gets tired after a day's work because a part of your vitality has been used up. A good night's sleep helps to recover the used up power.

"If you neglect constipation, you will soon see what a depressing and distressing effect it has on the nervous system. Headaches, sleeplessness, and no power to perform mental or physical work, are common signs of this condition.

Why I Recommend Flaxolyn

"Herbal Flaxolyn drives out constipation by helping to correct it. Flaxolyn acts gently on the liver and stimulates the natural flow of bile. Flaxolyn also helps to restore good digestion and hearty appetite. It helps also in the elimination of kidney and intestinal irritations.

"Flaxolyn in its new liquid form is easy to take. I have taken it myself with splendid results. I earnestly urge you to go to your nearest druggist and get a bottle of Herbal Flaxolyn at once. Its direct benefits are great, and its indirect benefits in strengthening your nerve-force, helping to purify the blood and giving you new strength and energy are even greater."

Contents of the Pleasant New Vitaminized Herbal

FLAXOLYN

Made after the open formula of Dr. Harris H. Luntz (M. D., D. O.) Contains the following herbs together with valuable medicaments approved by highest authorities.

1. Baked Flaxseed—Relieves congestion; acts as astringent.
2. Sarsaparilla Roots—The good old-fashioned system cleanser.
3. Buchu Leaves—Act on the kidneys and bladder.
4. African Ginger Roots—Quickens flow of vital digestive juices.
5. Dandelion Roots—The fine old-time intestinal cleanser.
6. Cardamom Seeds—Act on the stomach lining. Aromatic tonic.
7. Chinese Rhubarb—Invigorates the stomach.
8. Spanish Licorice Roots—Remove mucus that may clog and poison digestive organs.
9. Culver Roots—Stimulate natural bile flow.
10. Gentian Roots—Create healthy, normal appetite.
11. Belgian Valerian Roots—Tone nerves and induce restful sleep of health.
12. California Bark—Cleanses colon and removes foreign matter from intestines.

Headaches, Sleeplessness, Gas Vanish as Flaxolyn Puts Pittsburgh Man on His Feet Again

Never had any faith in drastic patent medicines that give nothing but temporary relief. Flaxolyn appealed to him because of its Herbal content. Felt the improvement as soon as he tried it and has been feeling good ever since!

"I have had various ailments for some time," writes Mr. E. J. Duffy, 364 Ella Street, McKees Rocks, Pa. "I never wanted to try the ordinary preparations, even for headaches, colds and coughs.

"I came across a Flaxolyn announcement in the newspaper, and after thinking it over, tried it—and what a relief! I really think the world of Flaxolyn after what it has done for me. That old restless sleep has gone and new sound refreshing sleep has replaced it. I have told all my friends about Flaxolyn and am glad to lend the use of my name and photograph to show others the high esteem in which I hold Flaxolyn."

Mr. Edward J. Duffy, one of the many here who consider Flaxolyn a really wonderful aid to greater health!

London Health Centre Lauds Amazing Flaxolyn Discovery for Constipation

Letters have also come from the ends of the world, to tell how Flaxolyn has been of help in treatment of such symptoms as dizzy spells, poor digestion, restless sleep, poor action of the liver, heartburn, bloating and other similar disturbances caused by constipation gases. From London, England, we now learn that men and women all over the British Empire are using Flaxolyn with the same fine results obtained by our folks here.

Dr. Edgar J. Saxon, head of the London Health Centre, says: "Flaxolyn has become a tremendous success in England. People like it because it is natural in its action. It brings a ruddy glow of health to the body that has been worn out by toxic poisons."

Why not give yourself that natural color that comes from a well regulated body? Flaxolyn is pleasant, economical and quick to bring results. Try it at once, don't wait—improve your health now—before the season of sickness sets in.

MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

It is absolutely guaranteed in writing that Flaxolyn will help in cases of general exhaustion, biliousness, sleeplessness, headaches, backache, dizzy spells, due to constipation gases—or druggists refund the purchase price.

Every one who would like to feel better, eat better, sleep better and look better can obtain a bottle of the wonderful new vitaminized herbal Flaxolyn on this liberal offer: If Flaxolyn does not bring satisfactory results by the time a bottle is used, you may bring back the partly used bottle and have the full purchase price refunded!

Flaxolyn contains nothing that can hurt you, and it may prove to be the means of bringing joy to your existence.

A large bottle of the New Vitaminized Flaxolyn may be obtained at your own druggist or

CIGARET SALES 119 BILLIONS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Almost 1,000 cigarets for each man, woman and child in the United States were taken from bond during the 1929 calendar year.

Figures made public by the Internal Revenue Bureau showed that the 119,049,105,104 taken from bond last year were 13,122,339,453 more than during 1928.

At an average cost of 13 cents for each package of 20, the 1929 cigaret bill would have taken $780,000,000 out of the pockets of the smokers.

In contrast, however, the amount of snuff taken out of bond last year dropped 619,000 pounds, as compared with the previous year, the total production amounting to 40,036,914 pounds. Manufactured tobacco also decreased about 6,000,000 pounds to a total of 337,718,425, and the production of playing cards dropped approximately 400,000 packs to a total of 51,878,382.

3 IN STOLEN CAR HELD FOR QUIZ

Three boys, arrested last night in a stolen auto, downtown, after, it was said, they tried to run through a red light, were held over by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones in Morals Court today.

Lieut. Edward O'Rourke, of the motorcycle division, testified one of the youths, Clarence Strother, 16, of 1834 Funston street, is suspected of having stolen 10 cars in Pittsburgh and Wilkinsburg.

The two others are Ralph Patterson, 17, of 513 Paulson avenue, and Vernon Shepherd, 16, of 811 Lang avenue. The auto in which they were arrested belonged to John P. Float, 1700 Maplewood avenue, Wilkinsburg, police said.

Sacred Heart Pulpit Ready by June 1

The new pulpit of the Sacred Heart Church, Alder street, is expected to be ready for use about next June. The carving of the pulpit, to be done by Frank Aretz, will conform to the medieval spirit and will have as one of its principal decorations carved wood statues of five of the greatest orators and doctors of the church.

Divorces at Peak During 1929 in Canada

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 7.—(AP)—A record for the number of divorces granted was set in Canada during 1929, when a total of 816 marital bonds were dissolved. This was an increase of 31 over 1928.

An almost steady increase was shown from 1913, when decrees totalled 60.

Probability that 816 does not represent the total of Canadian divorces is indicated in the marriage and divorce bulletin of the United States Census Bureau, which notes a large number of Canadian persons divorced in the United States.

DRIVER BREAKS OFFICER'S NOSE

Police Sergt. M. V. Dougherty was standing at Galveston and Western avenues at 2 a. m. today when before his very eyes he saw two autos collide.

Dougherty told the two drivers he was an officer and asked for their names. One of them, who thought the sergeant was a bus driver, hit him on the nose. The nose was broken.

That driver was arrested. He said he was Wilbert Schmidit, 32, of 1207 Hopkins street. For punching the police sergeant's nose he was fined $25 in North Side Police Court. A second charge of violating the automobile laws by running past a red light just before the accident was brought against him.

Schmidit admitted hitting the sergeant. In the confusion, the driver of the second car escaped, although police said he was not at fault.

McKeesport Man, Ill, Attempts Suicide

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 7.—(AP.)—John J. Caskey, 56, McKeesport merchant, was in a critical condition at a hospital here today with his throat cut. Police said he slashed himself with a razor in an attempt to kill himself. Caskey was found by Frank Mong, at whose home Mr. and Mrs. Caskey were visiting. The injured man had been suffering ill health, police were told.

Bargains in used house furnishings are advertised every day in the Classified Section.

COLLEGE HEAD QUARANTINED

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Guarded by two policemen, Dr. J. R. Drain, president of the Texas Chiropractic College, was marooned today in his own administration building, caught in a smallpox quarantine imposed by city health authorities.

At the City Hall it was said Miss Florence Bradley, college bookkeeper, was stricken with smallpox and the quarantine was declared because Dr. Drain refused to be vaccinated and insisted on remaining in his office at the school.

Dr. Drain said Miss Bradley was not at the college at the time she became ill.

Bids for State Police Plane Opened

HARRISBURG, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—An airplane for the state to be used in enforcement of the state aeronautic laws was one step nearer reality with the opening of bids for a plane here.

Seven bids were submitted to the Department of Property and Supplies for sale to the state of an open cockpit, three-place biplane. The Stearman Aircraft Company, of Wichita, Kan., offered the lowest bid, $7,650. The others ranged as high as $8,800.

All proposals were submitted to state aeronautical engineers to determine whether the planes met specifications.

HURT IN BLAST, $50,000 ASKED

Rose McEnteer, of Swissvale, ladies' dressmaker, asked $50,000 damages for injuries in a gas explosion through a suit filed in Common Pleas Court against Herman L. Grote, Ludwig I. Crote and Frederick C. Crote, trustees, and Conrad H. Grote and Augusta Grote, owners, of a block along Monongahela avenue, Swissvale.

One of these properties, No. 1910 Monongahela avenue, was occupied by Miss McEnteer, according to her allegations, and on February 17, 1928, four months after leasing it, a gas explosion wrecked the house, hurling her to the floor and pinning her under furniture and falling timbers.

She alleged she suffered serious and permanent injuries and has been unable to follow her occupation. The gas lines were worn out, escaping gas had been detected by tenants previously and the trustees and owners of the property had been notified and promised to make repairs, the suit alleged.

PERSONAL PROPERTY GAINS $4,000,000

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

ERNIE ROESER, veteran newspaperman, suggests an interesting question and supplies the answer. Where, asks Mr. Roeser, did Stephen C. Foster obtain the background for his songs of the South? We are not an authority on Foster, but we're willing to accept Mr. Roeser as such. Foster, living in Pittsburgh, spent many hours on the Monongahela wharf. Steamboats from the South crawled in, and with their Negro hands Foster made friends. Groups of them gathered on the wharf and harmonized, and Foster learned of the South from them.

What's more, it was Foster's guitar which furnished the musical accompaniment. Mr. Roeser reveals that Foster was more or less accomplished on the guitar and usually tested his melodies on that instrument.

Probably every physician of years in the profession has from his own experiences the material for one, if not two volumes. Dr. J. M. Patterson, for instance, could tell of an episode which occured shortly after he began the practice of medicine.

It was in the 1890's in Colorado. Physicians were fewer then. Dr. Patterson was implored to treat sufferers in a typhoid epidemic many miles distant. After riding wearisome hours on a slow, uncomfortable day coach he had to walk 10 miles of country road to reach his patients.

After administering to their needs Dr. Patterson trouped the 10 miles back to the railroad station. When dawn came, a train crew found him asleep on the platform. They woke him with the news that in another town the people were badly in need of a physician. He answered the second call. Ready for home, he discovered there were no trains for two days, but a section gang came to his aid. They placed his exhausted body on a handcar and while they bore him home he slept the sleep of the tired.

IN SEARCH of something important to report to the people, we came upon revolving doors. Which of Pittsburgh's revolving doors are hard to revolve, which are easy? We set out to push revolving doors. The first door we pushed was one in the Oliver avenue side of the Union Trust Building. It was very easy to push, responding smoothly and graciously to our lightest touch. The next revolving door we pushed was on the Grant street side of the William Penn Hotel. This was very hard to push, possibly because it is a comparatively new revolving door.

Our investigation completed, we were able to offer one conclusion: Half the revolving doors of Pittsburgh revolve easily, half do not.

However, our conclusion that half the revolving doors of Pittsburgh do not revolve easily is not offered in a critical vein. We feel that Pittsburgh has as many revolving doors which are easy to revolve as any city its size in the country, if not more.

Will Rogers Says:

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.

ARRIVED here from your old-time county seat, and for a country that has no tradition or background, you are not bad. Have read all your papers on the conference and here is one thing they seem to overlook that really makes this thing harder than you think. You must remember that its national pride that they are juggling with.

There is far more pride involved at this conference than ships. The minute you rate a nation, they naturally think you are establishing their importance in comparison to everybody else. Nations don't mind being small, but they don't want it advertised to the world, so remember it's not tonnage they are prorating, its prestige. If they only had to divide up ships, they would be home next week.

Chickie Is Heartbroken When Romance Crashes

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Chickie Bryce, only daughter of a devoted father and mother, is attending business college when the story opens. Arthur Sontag, a classmate, takes her to a dance and she confides to her friend, Mary Blake, that the avenues of romance are opening to her. Chickie's father fears the pitfalls ahead of his daughter, but his wife allays his fears. Chickie imagines she is in love with Arthur. Mary and Chickie blandly discuss love and marriage; Mary says it's too sordid for her, but Chickie thinks it will be all kisses and "walking on the mountain tops with her sweetheart by her side."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER III.

CHICKIE stood in the hall where the telephone was, listening to a voice. Her heart swelled up with such a thumping she could scarcely hear. A laugh came bubbling to her lips. She managed to say "Oh, yes! Why, yes, that's all right!"

In a dream she put the receiver on the hook. Pulses throbbed all about her throat and in her heart.

Arthur asked her to a show! Asked her why she hardly looked at him. Wanted her to be ready in half an hour.

She walked about the room drawing in her breath.

She stopped before the white bureau and absently picked up the program of her first dance, scanning his name, the lines he had drawn through other names.

The things he whispered in her ear—"pretty"—"sweet."

All that—and his blue eyes going down into her soul, and, oh! the sacred moment on the hilltop when his head had lowered.

She drew her hands together, trembling. A glowing shyness came upon her; a fear to meet him because of this exquisite sweetness they had known together.

Romance lifted its shining wings, flashed her thoughts miles beyond the present from this casual invitation to the movies to the flaming moment when Arthur would drop upon his knees, his face all white with love, and gently ask her to marry him.

It would be beautiful like that!

Happiness
Exultant When She Goes Out With Arthur

There was a love scene in the play. Chickie lived the tender scenes. When the hero took the girl in his arms she dropped her head, her hand curling in Arthur's. She whispered softly:

"Arthur—isn't that lovely?"

He grinned. That made her feel ashamed.

Yet that night, when he said with boyish crudeness, "Say, Chickie, gee! It's lots of fun going around with you. Say—let's do this often," she was entirely satisfied, melted as though he spoke some quivering poem.

Her days became sweet with the still music that ran beneath all the commonplace. They went often to the movies. They took walks. They phoned.

Chickie dwelt in a flame of expectance, waiting the moment when his eyes delved into hers, to hear him say: "Chickie, I love you!"

Her imagination was a soft fire making pictures.

Sometimes when he called at night she would sit at the piano and play the treble, making up her own bass to the poignant song, "Call Me Thine Own." She was carried away with sweet yearning. She fancied he would come and stand behind her; that he would reach over, cover her hands slowly with his, draw her to her feet. They would be swept together like rivers sparkling, tumultuous.

Once, coming to the last bar of the music, she turned, expecting to see his eyes dark pools of fire; expecting to see him dumb with emotion. He rubbed his hands over his brown hair, swung over to her with a "Gee! Chickie, you like those melancholy things. Say, that's awfully funny. Give us something peppy."

Yet there were moments so sweet they dropped into her thoughts like an immortal fragrance.

Visions Marriage
Chickie Flushes as Mary Mentions It to Her

One night, after a show, they stood before Chickie's house, still, monastic, quiet like an old faded canopy stretched about the secluded street. Its silence whispered with forgotten things—dim pulse of sorrows—murmur of banished joy.

"It's early," Arthur said. "Let's take a walk."

They went to the spot where they had stood those months

TAX NOTICES MAILED TO 60,000

Market Slump Fails to Halt Prosperity Here—Many Delinquents Face Penalties

Sixty thousand residents of Allegheny County own securities of corporations, monies on interest and mortgages subject to a state tax worth $700,000,000, the largest ever reported here, George J. Schad, of the Board of Tax Revision, said today.

On account of last November's stock market slump, Mr. Schad and other members of the board expected a large decrease in personal property returns carrying a four-mill tax.

"But as a matter of fact the wealth of the people of Pittsburgh and the county increased more than $4,000,000 last year, for in 1929 a total of only $696,000,000 was reported," Schad said.

NOTICES SENT OUT

At the present time, the board is notifying persons who have not made returns to do so without delay, to avoid paying a penalty of 50 per cent.

"Members of the bar and trust companies are aiding this office in urging their clients to make proper returns," Schad said.

"We have access to all audits of the Orphans Court and in accordance with the act of 1927 can research back for a period of five years on holdings not returned. Where mistakes have been made or otherwise, a 50 per cent penalty is added. As a result, most holders of personal property, taxable under the law, are more careful than formerly."

RETURNS STIMULATED

Mr. Schad said that the passage of the 1927 act has resulted in stimulating returns. "Hundreds apparently do not know the existence of this act," said Mr. Schad, "because out of probably 1,000 audits received from the Orphans Court, errors are found in 250 estates."

ARREST 2 NEAR CUTTING PLANT

Search for the owner of an alleged whisky-cutting plant in a one-story brick garage in the rear of 260 Lombard street was instituted by prohibition agents today following a raid on the place last night in which 321 quarts of whisky were seized.

While the agents were conducting a raid on the establishment, Clarence J. Rowan, 29, of 400 Collins avenue, stopped an automobile near the place, they said. The raiders hurried to the car and found 106 pints of whisky and five gallons of alcohol in it and arrested Rowan, according to their report.

A few minutes later they saw another machine drive up near the place. Its alleged driver, Harold Fellman, 30, of Junilla street, spied the agents and ran. He was arrested after a short chase, the agents said. Search of the car revealed 12 pints of whisky, it was reported.

Ferdinando Commenello, 30, of Essen street, Bridgeville, was released on a $1,000 bond, agents reported, after a 50-gallon still and 13 gallons of moonshine were found in his home.

In a raid on the saloon of Nicholas Staresinic, at 4747 Hatfield street, a small quantity of moonshine was confiscated, agents said. Staresinic was arrested.

The Rev. C. E. Krumbholz, superintendent of the New York Inner Mission Society, was the principal speaker at the annual meeting and rally of the Lutheran Inner Mission Society of Pittsburgh in the First Lutheran Church, Grant street, last night. Delegates from churches throughout Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania attended.

The society's annual report was presented by its superintendent, the Rev. S. C. Michelfelder. An election was held and the following were named directors: W. C. Bletcher, the Rev. T. L. Crouse, Walter Demler, Miss Alice Schwartz and the Rev. G. D. Simen.

2,000 SCOUTS AT THEATER

Two thousand Boy Scouts from all sections of Allegheny County will attend a meeting in the Warner Theater tomorrow morning, at which W. A. Neumann, sales manager of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company in the Pittsburgh district, and Thomas Venable, an associate scout executive of Allegheny County Council, will speak.

The meeting will be preliminary to the exposition of Boy Scouts March 4 to 8 in Syria Mosque. Following the meeting tomorrow the boys will witness a pre-view of the new film "No, No, Nanette," as guests of the Warner Brothers Company.

The Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's Question: Does the average student loaf his way through college, considering his four years spent there a continual vacation?

SARAH SHANNON, Crafton, student: "True, there are many students who loaf but when you figure the thing out you'll find that they are still in the minority. The average student realizes that his education is costing himself a lot of time and probably his family a lot of money. For that reason the student wants to get as much out of the course as humanly possible. A good many students who loaf, don't know they are loafing."

Miss Shannon

ERNEST SKAPIK, Clairton, student: "There isn't so much intentional loafing. About 60 per cent of the students don't know how to use their time. Thirty per cent appreciate the value of time but don't know how to apply it to their best interests. Only about 10 per cent know fully how to make the best use of their time and get the most out of college. Included in that 10 per cent are the real students."

Ernest Skapik

FRANK MARSHALL, East Liberty, student: "The average student does not loaf his way through college because he is spending, or his parents are spending, good money to enable him to get something worthwhile out of the course. However, a great number of the students accept the system of study as compulsory and apply themselves only enough to get through with a passing grade. In other words they don't take complete advantage of their opportunities."

Frank Marshall

MEDA BRASER, Oakland, student: "I just can't say how many really do loaf through the course and how many really apply themselves diligently. A large number of the young men and women go along slip-shod throughout the entire semester and then attempt to make up for their deficiencies at examination time by burning the midnight kilowatts overtime. This is not a good policy because what comes quickly is quickly forgotten. A lot think that way about it."

Miss Fraser

SARAH DRUM, Dormont, student: "Most of the students do not loaf. They can't afford to. Those who are fortunate to stay for the entire four year term are the ones who loaf the least. You can be pretty sure that those who do all the loafing are soon weeded out before they get very far. I will say, however, that a number of loafers get through the entire course without being found out. They only hurt themselves though."

Miss Drum

ELEANOR SAIER, Squirrel Hill, student: "Although there are no adequate statistics to prove the matter pro or con, the number of students who loaf is, in my opinion, about equally divided with those who really work. It is a 50-50 proposition. Most students have a goal. That goal is being successful enough to remain in college till they get their diploma at the end of the prescribed course of study. That goal requires intelligent application for attainment."

SEEK BANDITS IN TWO HOLDUPS

A bandit trio which held up a motoring couple and a pedestrian in the Perrysville avenue district within 20 minutes last night were being sought by police today.

C. J. Hein, of 349 Marshall avenue, and his companion, Alice Finch, of 2932 Norwood avenue, were riding in Riverview avenue near the entrance of Riverview Park when stopped by the three robbers, police say.

"How can we get to West View," one of them inquired. As Hein began directing, the men, police said, drew revolvers and ordered Hein and Miss Finch to throw up their hands. The thugs took $27 from Hein, but did not molest his companion.

The bandit car, the rear license plate of which was covered with a rag, sped up Riverview avenue.

Twenty minutes later the same trio leaped from the automobile at Norwood avenue and Charles street, and confronted John Sexton, of 2656 Norwood avenue, with revolvers. Sexton was robbed of $9.

Shortly after the holdups had been reported squads of police from the North Side and Woods Run stations scoured the park, but found no trace of the robbers.

Seek Two Women, Man in Coat Theft

Two women and a man were being sought by detectives today in connection with the theft of a fur coat valued at $1,500 from the store of Max Azen and Sons, at 705 Penn avenue, late yesterday.

The trio, well dressed, entered the store and asked to be shown some coats, according to detectives. While the clerk went to another part of the store the "customers" and coat vanished, detectives said. One of the women and the man were about 50 and the other about 30.

Glendale Man Dies In Fall From Engine

LEAVES HOME WIFE HUNTED

Mrs. Josephine Palmieri, her husband Luigi, and the neighbors downstairs, were playing cards Tuesday night in their home at 1328 Ivanhoe street.

Suddenly Mrs. Palmieri got up from the table, went into the hallway and disappeared. Palmieri told Bureau of Missing Persons operatives yesterday. She has not been seen since.

As a result, her two-year-old son, Jimmie, is left motherless and Palmieri has no one to cook his meals. The child is being cared for "by the lady downstairs."

Once before, according to the husband, Mrs. Palmieri left home for more than a week, and returned as unceremoniously as she disappeared. She has been in the habit of staying out late at dances and parties, Palmieri said, and because his remonstrances with her on various occasions caused her to leave home, he believes.

At the time of her disappearance Mrs. Palmieri had on a house dress, brown coat and an apron. She is described as being five feet in height, and having dark brown hair and black eyes. She is of medium build.

FIRE DAMAGES STEEL PLANT

A large two story brick building part of the Park plant of the Crucible Steel Company of America, Thirty-first street, this morning was threatened with destruction by fire which swept through the structure. Two alarms were sounded, bringing firemen from the Lawrenceville and downtown districts.

Officials of the company said that the damage probably would reach $12,000. They said that valuable records and steel had been destroyed. The damage estimate of Fire Chief Richard Smith was $8,000.

The building is located along the Thirty-first street bridge approach, in the center of the company property along the Allegheny river bank.

The damaged structure is known as the carbon building, and it houses the offices of five superintendents, the draughting rooms, labor headquarters, the sheet steel and general warehouses, the welding and scrap shops and the steam engineering and millwright departments. The flames did not reach the business offices but were confined to the shops.

Civic Bodies Organize For Campaign Against Drug Evil Here

Appalled by recent disclosures concerning the extent to which narcotic drug addiction is increasing, a group of club women, physicians, social workers and others are preparing to launch a vigorous campaign against the evil.

Impetus has been given the movement by the introduction in the House of Representatives by Congressman Stephen G. Porter of two bills which he hopes will help to stamp out the illicit dope traffic.

"Narcotic Education Week" is to be observed February 21 to 28. Arrangements are being made to call public attention to the menace of opium and cocaine through meetings of women's clubs, service clubs, civic and trade bodies. A speaker of authority will discuss the subject on February 27 in a radio address, to be broadcast from station KDKA.

VAST INCREASE CITED

Commenting today on plans for the observance of "Narcotic Education Week," Dr. C. B. Maits director of public health, called attention to a bulletin just published by the world conference on narcotic education, which says:

"The Treasury Department proceeded against 1,000 narcotic offenders in the year 1917. Last year the number was over 8,000. In the United States prisons, inmates convicted for violations of the federal narcotic laws constitute 34 per cent of the population. The next group, those convicted of violating the prohibition law, constitute 14 per cent. A recent checkup in the Federal penitentiary at McNeill's Island showed that 56 prisoners were bootleggers and 896 were drug peddlers! A survey of the prisons of New York City shows approximately half of the prisoners in turpitude cases to be drug addicts. Capture of the books of a 'dope ring' in Chicago revealed 18,000 drug addicts among the customers, involving yearly payments of $39,000,000. This is but one ring, in one city."

ALARMING PROBLEM

Dr. Maits said he regarded the debauching of young men and women by dope peddlers as one of the most alarming problems with which the civic authorities of the country are called upon to deal.

Mrs. Philip B. Benz, 2201 Brownsville road, radio chairman for Western Pennsylvania of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, is leading the campaign for action by women looking to the suppression of the dope traffic. She gained an insight into the ravages of narcotics through her hospital experience as a nurse.

Store Robbed, Owner Dies of Heart Attack

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Feb. 7.—(INS.)—When he discovered that his grocery store at Burnside, Pa., near here, had been robbed during the night, Vincent C. Darr, 73, suffered a heart attack today and died a few minutes later. The robbery was discovered when Darr opened the store for the day's business.

Thieves had gained entrance by cutting a hole in the door and had stripped the shelves in the front part of the store.

DANCER DENIES COVETING CASH

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 7.—(INS.)—Attempts of the defense to insinuate that Dolores Salazar, Mexican dancer, might have loved Ferdinand Pinney Earle for his money and not himself, today were hotly denied by the plaintiff, who is suing for $30,000.

"All I cared for was the man," she said. "I didn't care whether he had any money. Once he asked me if I could get along with $500 a month, and I told him I didn't need it."

In pressing her suit, the dark-eyed dancer revealed Earle as an adept in the art of making poetic love, of a "wedding" ceremony pronounced by Earle himself as they stood under the stars, and also of a wedding ceremony performed at Mexico City, which later, she found, was read by a "crazy Indian" masking as a priest.

She also accused the artist of cutting off her hair at Paris one day and burning a will in which he left her $100,000 life insurance and an agreement to settle $15,000 upon her.

And finally, she said as her cross-examination was completed, Earle ejected her from their Paris hotel. While sick and friendless, the late Ambassador Herrick, she said, came to her aid and sent her to a hospital.

When Miss Salazar's attorneys concluded their case yesterday, defense lawyers said they were content to allow the case to rest. The court, however, ruled that evidence must be introduced on behalf of Earle, who is now living in Paris with his fifth wife. His depositions are to be read today.

CITY MAY GET AIR RACES

The board of directors of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce yesterday voted unanimously to initiate a movement to bring the 1931 National Air Races to Pittsburgh.

The vote followed an address by Raymond M. Mariler, chairman of the aeronautics committee, in which he said there were strong possibilities that the races could be brought here. This year they will be held in Chicago. It was stipulated in the vote that the chamber will work for the races as an organization representative of Pittsburgh, and would in no way be involved in financing its management.

At the instance of Harry Dangerfield, of the general traffic committee, the Chamber registered opposition to the resolution presented in Congress by Senator Smith W. Brookhart, directing the Interstate Commerce Commission to adjust freight rates on farm products.

The board approved a recommendation of Chairman Arthur E. Braun, of the committee of taxation and finance, on the referendum of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States pertinent to the study of the Federal Reserve system.

At the recommendation of Dr. Thomas Baker, chairman of the mines and quarries committee, the board approved that the Census Bureau data to be gathered in the forthcoming coal census be tabulated to show the production and consumption of coal in civil sub-divisions smaller than states.

MALONE AGENT FOR INSURANCE

James F. Malone, former president of City Council, and candidate for mayor last November, announced yesterday that he had signed a contract as general agent of the Reliance Life Insurance Company, of Pittsburgh, his office to be at 1313 Farmers Bank Building, in which building the company retains its home office.

In addition to having charge of the agency, Malone will personally write life, accident and health insurance. He was actively engaged in the insurance field from 1914 to 1918, when he entered public life as director of supplies under Mayor E. V. Babcock. All during his political career he maintained an active interest in an insurance agency.

"I think life insurance is an outstanding business," he said, in announcing his business connection. "It gives me the opportunity to engage in a business without being tied down to a corporation, and it is the freedom and opportunity to do good for my fellow man that attracts me to it. Life insurance from now on will be my business, but I always will take an active interest in clean government and public affairs."

S., and county officials and prominent Shriners. The affair's a testimonial dinner tonight.

ROXAS ARRIVES, SHRINE GUEST

"When the time comes that the American Congress wishes to act on Philippine independence, I am sure it will work fairly and for the good of the Islands," Manuel Roxas, speaker of the Philipine House of Representatives, told members of the reception committee from Syria Temple who met him today. Roxas is in Pittsburgh as principal speaker at the testimonial dinner to C. H. Landefeld, newly-elected potentate of the Temple.

"As to the present expediency of liberating us; our young commerce can stand separation from American free trade now better than when it is fully developed," he maintained.

Roxas, called by fellow countrymen, it is said, "the George Washington of the Philippines," was accompanied by the Philippine commissioner to the United States, Camilo Osias, and Senator Tom Conally, of Texas.

"As a low tariff man," Conally said, "I am more than glad to have this opportunity of seeing Pittsburgh's high-tariff industries for the first time. No member of Congress should miss it."

More than 1,500 Shriners were expected to attend the dinner this evening. Members of the order will renew their fraternal pledges during the affair at the William Penn Hotel.

CO-EDS DANCE; MEN BARRED

By E. W. PRENDERGAST,
Staff Correspondent.

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Feb. 7.—The gals wear the "Tuxes" at Waynesburg College.

Which fact, Mr. Ripley places both school and school girls in niche apart.

This situation grows out of the co-ed dance, to be held tonight in the armory. No men will be admitted—but each girl must appear with what seems a man. The ruse is the partner will be a girl dressed in pants and coat and vest.

There may be men who will try to crash the gate. The co-eds have thought of that.

On one side of the door Charlie Farrell, star debater of the college, will stand, ready with oracular persuasion. On the other side Tom (Feet) Boyd, heavyweight wrestler, takes his position. The state police have also been requested.

SECOND TRIAL

It's the second dance of the kind—with the men absolutely banned from the floor because—well, because. Last year men couldn't even peek. This year they may buy tickets and sit in a balcony with the mothers and chapersons and such.

Of the outside guards, the girls will have it understood that they are trusted employes, that even One-Eyed Connelly may beckon in vain. One fellow pleaded with the committee, announcing that he would have six suits on the dance floor—his sister had loaned them. They said "no."

The town's excited. Spokesmen for the male students refused to be quoted, although it was reported that tomorrow night will be Saturday night—and Waynesburg is somewhat of a Saturday night town.

"They'll have a good time tonight—but tomorrow night is Saturday night. Then we'll give them the air," one of the best male dancers of the town declared anonymously.

"Say," a committeewoman replied, "we go along 364 nights out of the year. Tonight-you're out, out, out."

FIGURES RECEIPTS

Miss Marjorie Carson, Charleroi co-ed is general chairman. She predicts more than 150 couples, which, at 75 cents apiece will give—she figured it out.

"The girls have borrowed tuxes, business suits or military uniforms and it's to be a gala affair—with the men upstairs or out," she said.

She denied that the girls had changed the college yell to "Don't be so Effeminate, Alice," which some of the youths claimed was the slogan the girls were using when they were practicing dancing together.

Besides allowing the boys to watch this year, town girls and alumnae of the college have been invited by Alpha Gamma Theta, the sorority sponsoring the "whoopa" party.

Bali Island Pictured as Artists' Paradise

By PENELOPE REDD

"THE LAST PARADISE" is a nation of artists, without a single pauper, said Andre Roosevelt at the Carnegie Museum yesterday, prior to his lecture on Bali.

"The Balinese are the greatest artists in the world today. Art flourishes spontaneously throughout the land. Every village has its orchestra, its dancing chorus," continued Mr. Roosevelt.

"The native religion which is a nature worship somewhat modified by Hinduism is the source of unceasing art activity. Temples are contantly built. Every village has its traditional architecture by inheritance; but every man is a natural sculptor in wood and stone.

Penelope Redd

FEATURES RELIGION

"Their paintings either on paper or wood are chiefly religiously inspired by the Sacred Hindu Books.

"A strange new influence, however, appears in their modern school of art which reveals the influence of the American motion picture.

"Change, despite their isolation, is characteristic of the Balinese, who are ever flexible in their designs. They may use at times rather precious variations of flowers and leaves almost like the French 'art noveau.'

"Again they will produce designs that are as abstract and dynamic as any developed in the studios of the sophisticated modernists. Ofttimes they will adapt Chinese designs because their trading relation with China has been close.

"Although Bali is an island but one and one-half miles from Java, it is completely free of any Javanese influence. For example, the Javanese make batiks while the Balinese confine their interest to weaving alone.

"The chief reason for Bali's independence is its peculiar physical location which permits of three crops a year, and which provides the inhabitants with every luxury and necessity excepting metal.

"Hindu conquerors sometime between the sixth and eight centuries modified the religion; and Chinese traders introduced Chinese metals, porcelains and other objects."

PORCELAIN COLLECTION

Mr. Roosevelt has made a collection of Sung and Ming porcelains, terra cottas and bronzes which the natives use for everyday living. Experts declare them of museum standard and the best produced in China.

Andre Roosevelt, a cousin of the most famous of his clan, Theodore Roosevelt, is one of the few Americans who kno" Bali well. When asked why he went to Bali, he replied:

"All Roosevelts travel to strange places."

Bali is his great enthusiasm and his permanent home. His romantic but realistic motion picture, the first of its kind, "The Malay Kriss," is almost ready for release.

His visit to the United States is occasioned by the final preparation of his book on Bali, "The Last Paradise."

NAVAL PARLEY SUCCESS SEEN

"If any substantial limitation of naval armaments can be obtained at the five-power naval parley in London, it will be the most noteworthy and meritorious achievement of the present age," Miss Sara Soffel, attorney-at-law, declared at the February meeting of the School of Politics.

The school, sponsored by the Allegheny County Council of Republican Women, was held in the Blue Room of the William Penn Hotel yesterday.

In her talk, which was heard by prominent Republican women from all parts of the county, Miss Soffel traced the psychological backgrounds motivating the demands of the five powers at the conference.

The "school" was in charge of Mrs. C. A. Verner, president of the council.

A feature of the children's program will be a suite by Deems Taylor, which will be played for the first time in Pittsburgh. It depicts five pictures from "Alice in Wonderland." The "Macbeth" Overture will be repeated at the Sunday night concert.

The "Roman Festivals," by Respighi, played in Pittsburgh only once before, will also be heard. This number necessitates eight additional men in the orchestra, including a mandolin player.

Ernest Lunt will conduct the Mendelssohn Choir, accompanied by the orchestra, in the "Challenge of Thor,"—Elgar; "Song of Destiny,"—Brahms, and "Hallelujah" (Mount of Olives)—Beethoven. He will sing, unaccompanied, "Swansea Town,"—Holst, and "Sorrow,"—Palmgren.

During the day nine prisoners were sent to Westmoreland County jail, four to the Indiana County jail, two to the Cambria County jail, one to the Washington County jail and two to the Allegheny County jail. PATRICIA PITT'S COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Bride-Elect To Be Much Feted

IF the next three weeks of February keep pace socially with this, the first, no one, not even the gayest minded, will shed a tear for the departure of the formal social season.

There've been weddings and dinners and tonight there'll be a dinner-dance in the Pittsburgh Golf Club for members of the Rolling Rock Hunt.

Perhaps the most important event of the latter part of the month will be the wedding on February 20 of Florence Wainwright, daughter of Mrs. Harris Ewalt Wainwright, Jr., and Robert Kerr Follansbee, son of the John Follansbees, of Squirrel Hill avenue.

There'll be a number of entertainments for Florence before her wedding day. On Friday evening, February 14, Mrs. Norman Brown and her daughter, Nancy, will give a dinner dance in their home. And on the following evening Janet McKinney will entertain in her home in Coraopolis, for the bridal party.

On Monday evening, February 17, Janet Hardie will give a dinner and a theater party in honor of Florence and her fiance, and the following day Jean Keating will give a luncheon in her home.

The John H. Follansbees will give the rehearsal dinner in their home, and the day of the wedding Rebecca Follansbee will give the wedding breakfast in her home.

TAFFETA FAVORED FOR MANY GARMENTS IN SPRING MODE

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 7.—The rustle of taffeta will make itself heard in the spring song of the mode. It achieved a degree of popularity during the season, and lately has been used for delightful dancing frocks. Especially important are the pompadour frocks, the rose patterned taffetas lending themselves admirably to the bustled effect of these frocks and accentuating their crisp charm.

Up to now taffeta has been more successful for evening wear than for clothes designed for daily activities, but it may well be very popular this spring for day as well as night. The duller version of this material finds more favor than the shiny weave, which should, in any case, be avoided by women of more generous build, whom, we hope, also shun satin in its more lustrous aspects. For the stout woman, the duller the surface, the brighter the resulting costume and appearance she will present to the world.

VIEWING attractive sports ensembles is one pleasing way of passing a bleak winter day and so we are sending you a sketch of one that should have a tonic effect on your sartorial spirits. It is from the showrooms of Miler Soeurs and is of light weight homespun in two tones of gray, the frock worn beneath a sleeveless jacket of the same material. Rows of dark gray stitching border the edges of both jacket and frock. A white crepe de Chine gilet is set into a deep curving decolletage at the front of the bodice. Both frock and coatee have patch-pockets and the belt is of dark gray leather. A suggestion of a circular flare is found in the skirt.

THE very smart dinner dress is of black taffeta and bears the label of Patou. Although it is practically princess in line, there is a slight blousing of the bodice at the natural waistline, which softens the severity of the unbroken line. Vertical set-on bands end in flaring godets and the skirt is long all around with but a slight dip at back. With this dress is worn a knee-length straight jacket of matching taffeta, making a very effective ensemble.

Romance Gone, Girl Wife Asks Divorce

Two weeks after her elopement, the romance of a high school miss was lost in the realities of marriage and she returned to her home and school, according to the testimony of Mrs. Edith L. DeHonney, 17, granted a divorce in Common Pleas Court by Judge James B. Drew.

The suit was brought in her behalf by her mother, Mrs. Rose Harvey, of 7411 Tioga street, against James M. DeHonney, 22, of 7627 Mulford street. Exactly a year ago, while a student at Westinghouse High School February 7, 1929, at the age of 16, the girl ran away with DeHonney to Wellsburg, W. Va., to be married. Mrs. DeHonney said she left her husband February 23 last because she was sick and hungry and mistreated and returned to her mother.

Swiftest, Easiest Way to End Bilious Spell

When you neglect those first symptoms of constipation—bad breath, coated tongue, listlessness, the whole system soon suffers. Appetite lags. Digestion slows up. You become headachy, dizzy, bilious.

It's easy to correct sluggish bowel action! Take a candy Cascaret tonight. See how quickly—and pleasantly—the bowels are activated. All the souring waste is gently propelled from the system. Regular and complete bowel action is restored.

Cascarets are made from pure cascara, a substance which doctors agree actually strengthens bowel muscles. All drug stores have Cascarets, 10c.

Ravishing Ensemble for Youngsters

Pattern 1674

Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS

The ensemble developed from the grown up mode, is the newest feature for young fashionables this season. The cunning model sketched today comprises a sleeveless frock made of printed cotton fabric, and a coat lined with the fabric of the dress. There is a bit of trimming on the little dress, and two inverted pleats for fullness.

Design 1674 may be made of pique, linen, pongee or silk crepe. The coat would be smart of kasha, jersey or light weight tweed. Of course, both garments may be worn with other things and retain their smartness.

May be obtained only in sizes 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6 requires 1⅞ yards 36-inch fabric for dress and 2⅛ yards for coat.

No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model. The pattern has ample and exact instructions. Yardage is given for every size. A perfect fit is guaranteed.

Patterns will be delivered upon receipt of FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins carefully wrapped or stamps. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE wanted.

The NEW WINTER FASHION BOOK is FIFTEEN CENTS, but only TEN CENTS when ordered with a pattern. Address all mail and orders to Sun-Telegraph Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth Street, New York City.

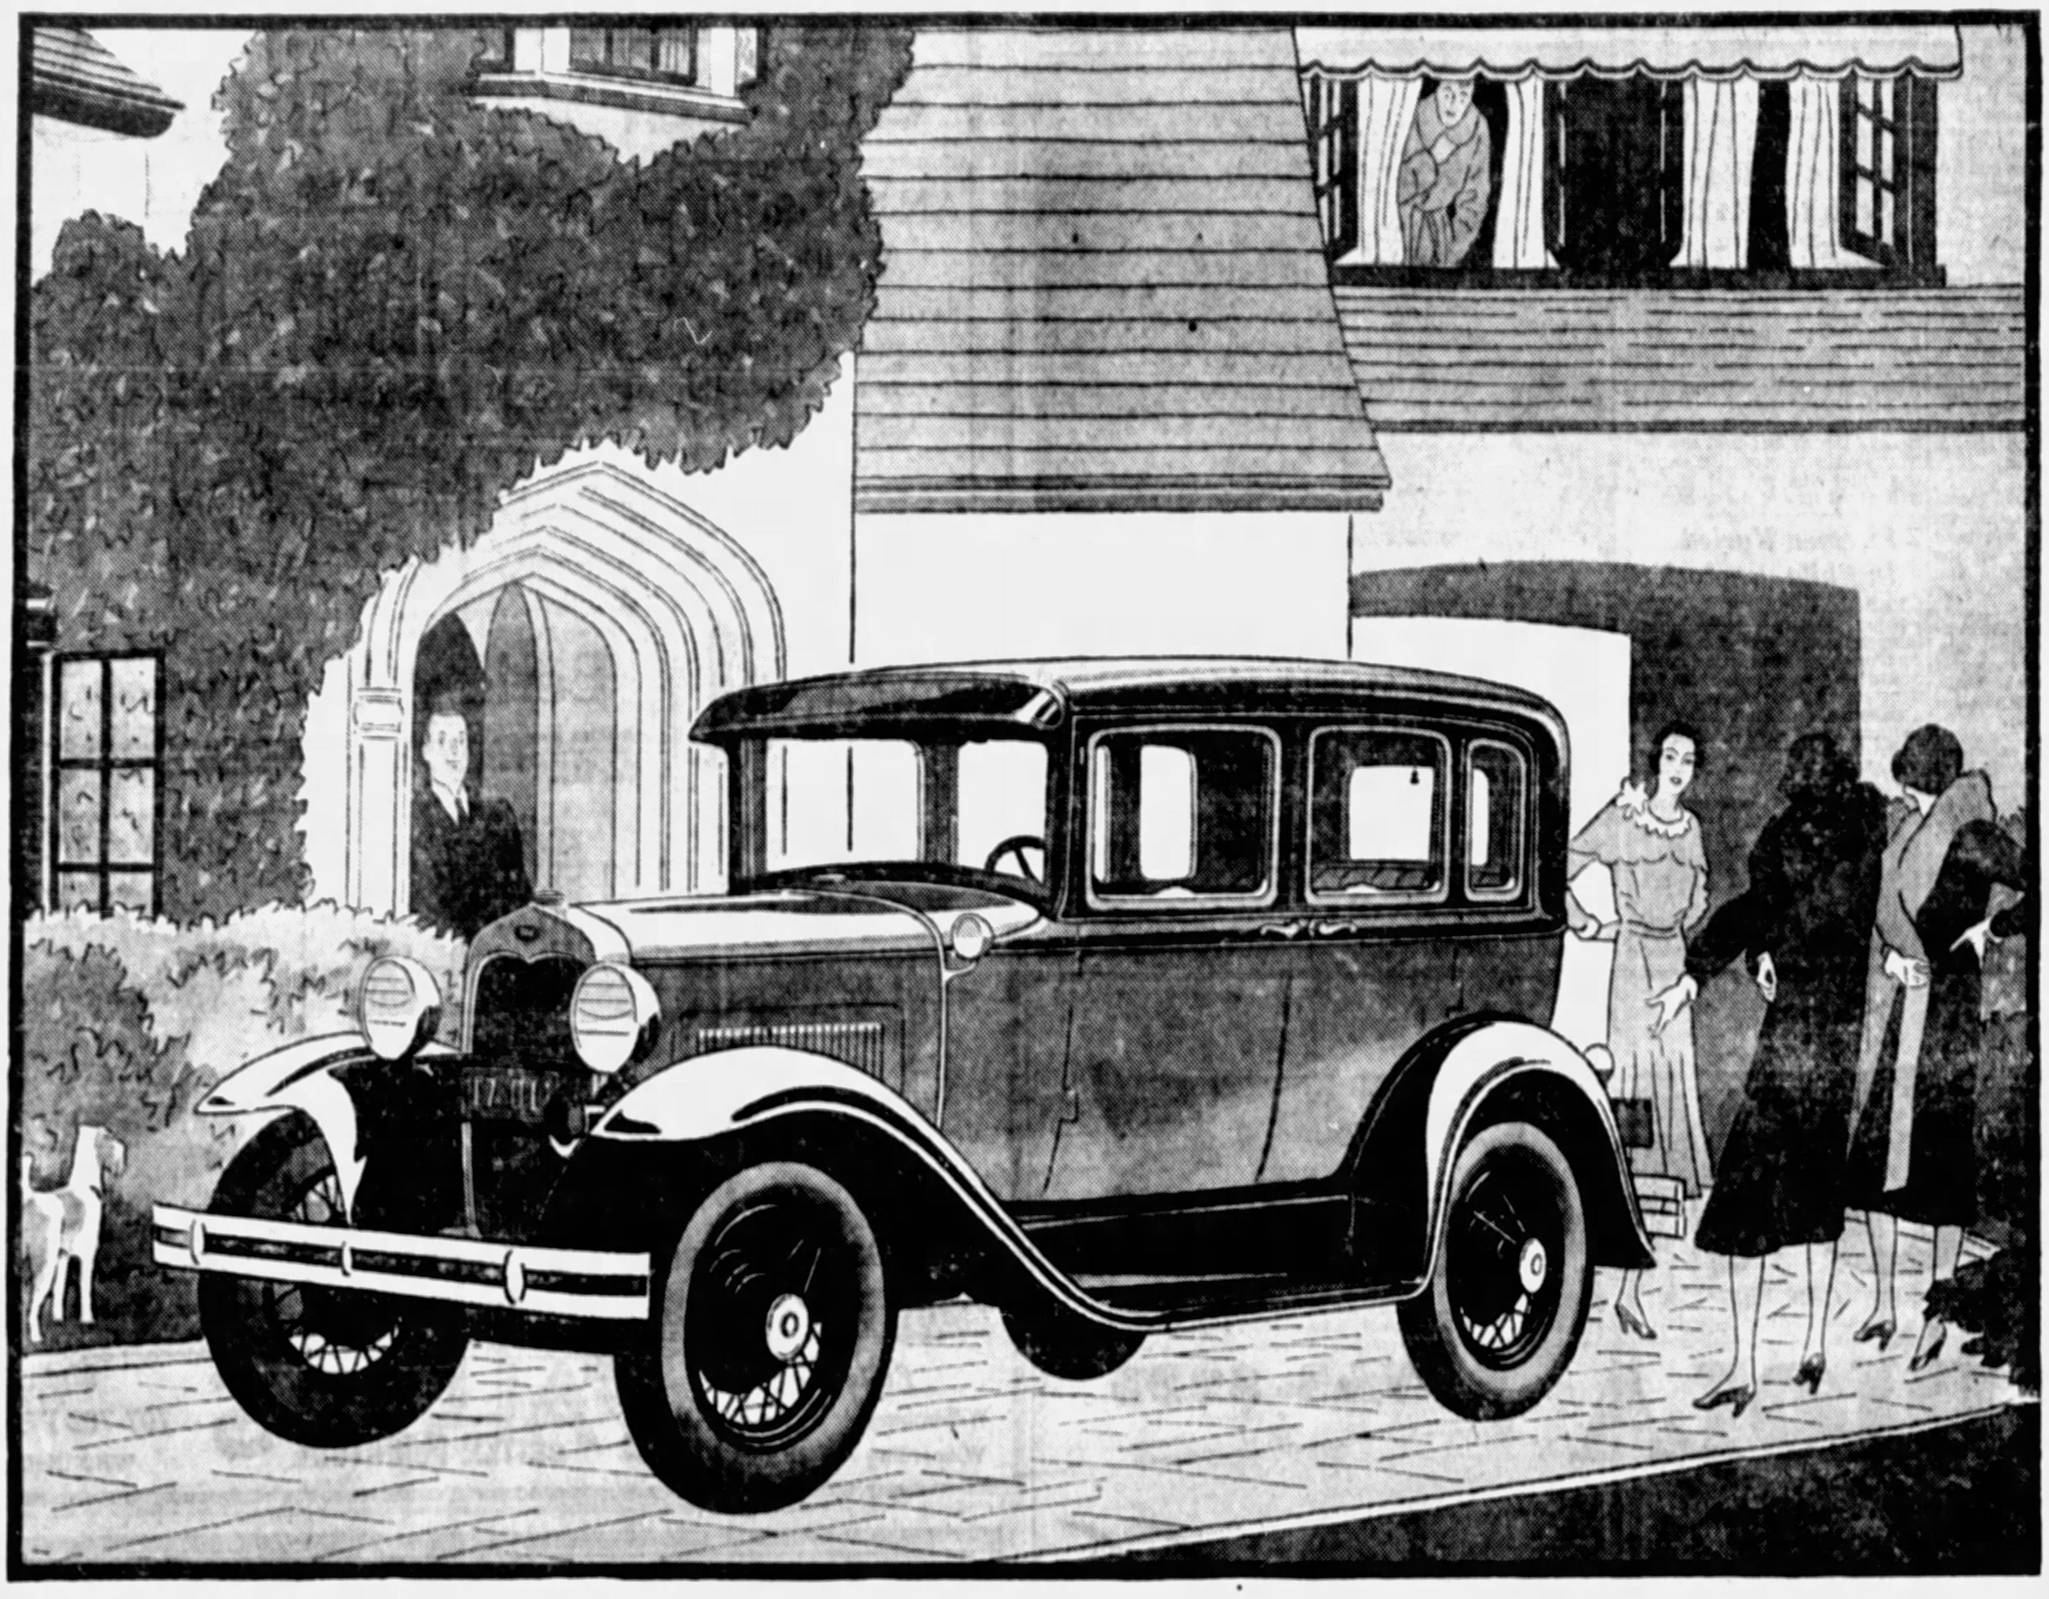
New Beauty for the New Ford



THE NEW FORD TOWN SEDAN

In the Town Sedan you see a distinguished example of the unbroken sweep of line which adds so much charm and grace to all the new, roomy Ford bodies. Radiator, hood, cowl, lower roof line, fenders, wheels — every point of design reflects the new style and beauty that have been placed within the means of every one. All of the new Ford cars are finished in a variety of colors.

ANOTHER STEP FORWARD

THE introduction of the new Ford bodies has set a new high standard of motor car value. From the new deep radiator to the tip of the curving rear fender, there is an unbroken sweep of line—a flowing grace of contour gaining added charm from the rich and attractive colors. « « « « « «

You will take a real pride in the smart style and fresh new beauty of the Ford just as you will find an ever-growing satisfaction in its safety, comfort, speed, acceleration, ease of control, reliability and economy. In appearance, as in mechanical construction, craftsmanship has been put into mass production. New beauty has been added to outstanding performance.

A feature of unusual interest is the use of Rustless Steel for the radiator shell, head lamps, cowl finish strip, hub caps, tail lamp and other exposed metal parts. This steel will not rust, corrode or tarnish and will retain its bright brilliance for the life of the car. Here, as in so many other important details, you see evidence of the enduring quality that has been built into the new Ford.

BAKED steak with mushrooms! There's a dish worthy of a Sunday dinner. And when its entry to the table is triumphantly preceded by a pineapple mint cocktail—need I say more?

A thick slice of sirloin is best for baking. Put the meat in a pan, and spread it thickly with shortening. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Add a layer of thinly sliced lemon, then a layer of chopped green pepper. (One green pepper will be sufficient.)

Now comes a layer of onion, cut in thick slices. Pour a bottle of catsup over it. Bake in a hot oven, basting frequently, and allowing 20 minutes of baking to the pound. Bake the mushrooms on top of the steak.

A CHARLOTTE RUSSE is a fitting conclusion to our Sunday dinner. You make it like this: Soak 1 tablespoon gelatine in 3 tablespoons cold water. Cook 2-3 cup maple syrup until it spins a thread. Add the gelatine and stir until it dissolves. Pour slowly into 2 stiffly beaten egg whites. When the mixture begins to congeal, fold in 2-3 cup whipped cream. Add ½ cup broken pecan nut meats.

Have ready a sponge cake form, made by scooping out the center of a large sponge cake in the shape of a box. Turn the mixture into the center of the cake shell and serve with maple sauce.

SALADS for a Valentine party really should carry out the color scheme of Valentine—red and a bit of white. A cucumber basket adds beauty and gayety to Valentine festivities when made as follows:

Cut the cucumbers in halves, lengthwise. Remove the pulp and seeds and blend with mayonnaise and cream cheese, colored with red vegetable coloring. A semi-circle of sweet red pepper may be added for a handle after the cucumber has been filled with the cheese combination.

A TOMATO JELLY salad molded in heart shape, will be another beautiful addition to the table and a happy addition to the Valentine party menu.

Use 3 cups of stewed tomatoes, either fresh or canned, 1 slice of onion, 1 stalk of celery, 1 bay leaf, 1 clove, ¼ green pepper pod, 1 teaspoon of sugar, salt, ½ box of gelatine, ½ cup of cold water and lettuce and mayonnaise.

Cook tomatoes with seasoning. Soak the gelatine in cold water, add to boiling tomatoes, strain and pour into the heart molds. Make a nest of lettuce leaves for each heart and top with whipped cream mayonnaise.

A STUFFED TOMATO is another choice salad, especially if it has a filling for 6 tomatoes of ¾ of a cup of diced cucumber, ½ cup of diced cooked chicken, ¼ cup chopped nuts and ¼ cup of mayonnaise.

And don't overlook the possibilities of potato salad as a Valentine delicacy. Add a generous amount of sweet red pepper to the salad, place it on a bed of lettuce and top it with a heart cut from pimento.

Shrimp, lobester and pink salmon are other colorful selections for Valentine and they should be served with chopped celery and mayonnaise on lettuce, while for sheer loveliness and tastiness few salads surpass a sweet red pepper filled with beautifully white crab meat as a Valentine delicacy.

MOTHERS must be especially careful, to provide adequate nourishment for the children these cold days, and a milk soup is an ideal food after they have been playing outdoors an hour or so.

Use 3 cups of milk, 8 small slices of toasted bread, 2 egg yoks, ½ teaspoon of sugar and salt and pepper.

SUCH A GLORY IN TOMATOES WAS NEVER SEEN BEFORE!

AND SUCH A DELICIOUSNESS IN TOMATO SOUP NEVER BEFORE REACHED YOUR LIPS

Mother Nature is generous, but she is also capricious.

She has her moods. Not every season does she reveal her greatest magic. As if to make us prize her treasures all the more, she withholds her utmost perfections for chosen seasons.

And this season belongs to the Tomato!

For 32 years Campbell's have been leaders in the culture and development of fine tomatoes. Without reservation we say that such tomatoes as these will go down in history.

What magnificent color! What beauty! Seldom in a lifetime is such perfection attained. No wonder our skilled French chefs responded with unbounded enthusiasm.

Just at the moment these wonderful tomatoes had reddened and ripened to their full, firm maturity, they were plucked and blended into Campbell's Tomato Soup.

No doubt this has always been your favorite soup. But taste it now! Taste it now!

You will say its famous color never flashed to the eye a more alluring or fascinating challenge. You will say its tonic, invigorating flavor never gave to your appetite a more quickening thrill.

We thank Nature for giving us this chance to "paint the lily," to make Campbell's Tomato Soup even more tempting and delicious than ever.

Naturally it is sweeping to a new high record in popularity. People are even more eager to enjoy it—serve it oftener—revel in its unique and individual flavor.

The soup for many meals, for many different uses. There's a welcome convenience in getting 6 cans at a time. Do this today.

Good Butter Supplies Needs of Human Body

Select the butter you use on your table as carefully as you do the milk, Dr. Copeland suggests. It is a good investment to buy good butter, he says.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
Former Health Commissioner of New York City. United States Senator from New York.

DIFFERENT seasons call for different foods. In winter, we need more of the energy and heat producing foods than in summer. In the cold, bracing days, we use up far more energy than we do in the heat of summer, and also need more heat to keep us warm.

It is well to plan your meals so that the foods containing heat and energy producing elements are present—fats, sugars and starch. We find them in vegetables, fruits and animal fats.

One of the most wholesome fats is found in butter. I suppose not many give thought to what it means to produce the enormous quantities of butter needed by the public. It is interesting to note that the people of the United States consume half of all the butter used in the world.

GET GOOD BUTTER

There used to be a tremendous amount of poor and often contaminated butter sold on the market. Now the Government regulations are strict and specific as to the quality of butter sold and we are very fortunate in having a uniformly high grade of butter.

The butter to be served on your table should be as carefully selected as the milk you consume. It must be clean and free from impurities. You really practice a form of health insurance when you insist on having the best butter and the best milk that your dealer can provide. Why not pay a few cents more for the purest and highest grade of butter when you are assured that that important food adds just so much to your good health?

NUMBER OF VARIETIES

Of course, there are any number of grades and varieties of butter on the market. One may use a poorer grade of butter for cooking because it is to be exposed to a high degree of heat. This destroys any lurking bacteria which may be in it. But for table use the best is none too good.

Great strides have been made in dairy sanitation. Cleanliness and refrigeration have won out in the battle against deadly bacteria in dairy products.

There used to be sold on the market almost nothing but sour-cream butter. In the early history of the factory system of butter-making the souring or ripening of cream before it was churned for butter was the rule. In this souring process a desirable acid flavor was obtained.

BODY NEEDS OIL

About 1905 experiments showed that the keeping qualities of butter was better when made from unripened pasteurized sweet cream than from sour cream. This sweet-cream butter—now has a wide reputation for its high quality and is becoming more and more popular with the general public. It is mild and creamy and maintains it flavor even when exposed to high temperatures in retail stores and the home.

The human body must have a lot of oil to keep the joints lubricated and the skin flexible. The secretions of all the glands of the body are more or less fatty in their content. The hair is kept from being brittle and is given life by the oily secretions of the scalp. You cannot do better than to use plenty of good butter in supplying all these needs.

and toast it. Heat the milk to boiling, add the egg yolks, stirring constantly and heat enough to thicken. Add the salt and pepper and pour over the toast. If the children like milk toast they will be more than pleased with this delicacy.

Soft boiled eggs, with gravy, will make a whole luncheon for the children if it's followed by a baked apple, for instance.

Lay a soft boiled egg on a slice of well buttered toast. Pour thickened meat stock over the toast and eggs, and heat for 3 minutes in a very hot oven.

A POTATO SOUFFLE is another wholesome way to please them when they return from school.

Use 2 cups of hot washed potatoes, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 eggs, 1 cup milk and a dash of paprika.

Add the melted butter, yolks of the eggs (beaten very light), a dash of paprika and the milk to the hot potatoes. Mix thoroughly and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Pile in a well-buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven about 10 minutes.

CARAMEL NUT APPLES—Pare and core 4 tart apples. Make a syrup of 1 cup each of sugar and water, boil 5 minutes. Place apples in syrup, cover and simmer until tender. Remove to compote glasses and add 1 tablespoon gelatine, soaked in ½ cup cold water, to the hot syrup. For the apple filling cook 1 cup brown sugar, ¼ cup milk and 1 tablespoon butter to soft ball stage, then add 1 cup chopped nut meats. Place this caramel in cavities of apples. Pour apple syrup around them and set away to chill.

BAKED CORNED PORK—Here's how to cook that delectable dish, baked corned pork:

Follow these directions carefully:

To bake corned pork: You may use either the corned ham or shoulder, but the ham cuts to better advantage.

Wash it carefuly. Put into a kettle with cold water to cover. Let it slowly come to a boil and simmer gently until tender. A 12-pound ham will require about 4 hours. Let it cool in the liquid in which it was boiled.

With a sharp knife remove the skin. Mark the surface of the fat in squares.

Mix 1 teaspoon of dry mustard with ½ cup of brown sugar. Spread it over the surface of the boiled pork, and put a whole clove in the center of each square.

Place on a rack in a baking pan. Mix 1 cup of the liquor in which the pork was cooked with 1 cup of brown sugar. Pour this into the pan and use it to baste the ham.

Let it bake in a moderate oven until nicely browned. It will require about 40 minutes.

STUFFED POTATOES—Large sweet potatoes, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon butter, ½ cup rich milk, 1 cup chopped walnuts or pecans. Bacon.

Scrub potatoes and bake until mealy, cut in half, lengthwise; scoop out the pulp and mash thoroughly. To each pint of pulp add above seasonings. Heap into shells, lay a thin slice of bacon on each half, and bake in 400 degree oven until crisp and brown.

SWEET POTATOES—Cone-shaped mounds of sweet potatos, sugar-coated with a golden brown crust, look very handsome on the luncheon or dinner plate and are easy for the amateur to cook. Cook and mash sweets as you do white potatoes. Cool sufficiently to handle, and shape into cones. Then sprinkle with sugar (either white or brown), put into a hot oven, and they emerge golden cones that are delicious to behold and eat.

CREAMED CHIPPED BEEF—Heat 1½ tablespoons butter in a frying pan. Add ¼ pound thinly sliced dried beef, and cook until the edges curl. Remove the beef and add 2 tablespoons flour to the fat remaining in the pan and blend until smooth. Add 2 cups milk and cook for 5 minutes. Then add the beef and cook over hot water for 5 minutes longer. Serve on toast.

DATE BREAD—Sift pastry and graham flour, measure so there will be 2 cups of each flour, then resift with 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt. Return the bran in the sifter to sifted mixture. Add 1 cup chopped dates, 1 cup walnuts broken in pieces and ½ cup light brown sugar and mix well. Beat 1 egg and add 2 cups of milk. Combine liquid and dry ingredients and beat well. Let stand 10 minutes then bake in a slow oven about 1¼ hours. Smaller loaves are nice for tiny sandwiches and they bake in shorter time. This will yield one large loaf.

LOVEJOY never knew exactly when it was that she began to be jealous of Norrie Shane.

At first it was a joy to have her in the house.

For peace and order and comfort seemed to flow out in waves from Norrie's busy, quiet hands. She did things without any fuss. And there never was a hair out of place on her smooth, brown head or a spot to spoil the whiteness of her crisp starched uniforms.

She took beautiful care of young Tommy. She did the mending and got breakfast every morning. She never forgot to wind the clock at night or to set the empty milk bottles out on the back porch.

She helped Tom bring the border plants and the tomato plants from the backyard of the old house in Stallings lane.

"She plays up to Tom all the time," Lovejoy told Aunt Em rather bitterly, the first Sunday afternoon in the new home.

They were in Lovejoy's lovely orchid-and-gray bedroom and Lovejoy was sitting with her back bared to the sun that came streaming in through the ruffled organdy curtains.

"I'm trying to get a good coat of tan so that I can wear my new sun-back dresses," she explained to Aunt Em.

Aunt Em shook her sensible head over the very thought of sun-back dresses.

"I declare you women will be running around in bathing suits pretty soon!" she said. "You ought to be ashamed to wear clothes like that, Lovejoy. A decent, respectable married woman ought to be ashamed to run around dressed like some young flapper!"

"Why," asked Lovejoy wide-eyed, "Why shouldn't a married woman try to make herself as attractive as she can be—That's what's wrong with a lot of married women! They forget to fix themselves up and some baby-doll walks off with their husbands!"

Aunt Em stared thoughtfully down into the side-yard where Norrie Shane was sitting in the new lawn swing with young Tommy on her lap.

Discusses Norrie

"The only way that a woman can hold her husband these days, is by her look and her pep," Lovejoy went on, dipping her handkerchief into a box of sunburn powder and rubbing it on her face. "The offices downtown — the street-cars — every place is so full of good-looking girls nowadays that the old-fashioned wife who stays at home and keeps house hasn't a ghost of a chance!"

She waved one of her carefully manicured hands towards the sideyard.

"Now, there's Norrie, for example," she said. "Norrie gets Tom's breakfast every morning. She brings the paper in from the porch so that he can look at it while he's eating. She spent the whole morning making strawberry shortcake because he happened to mention that he liked it . . . and he doesn't even see her half the time. Do you know why?"

Aunt Em only grunted.

"Because she hasn't any lure," said Lovejoy, answering her own question. "That's why! She's not any more interesting to him than Hilda was."

She stopped talking and swung around in her chair, peering down into the sideyard.

Tom had come out of the house. He was standing beside the lawn swing, saying something to Norrie.

Norrie's face was raised, and for an instant it was almost beautiful with the smile that flashed across it.

"Let's go and look at them," she said clearly. And with the baby in her arms, she got up from the swing and followed Tom toward the back of the house.

Lovejoy Gets Angry

"They've gone to look at their tomato plants," Lovejoy said in a disgusted tone.

"They waste more time on that silly old garden!" she added. "The other night they stayed out there, working, until dark."

Aunt Em made a grunting sound in her throat once again.

"Why don't you show a little interest in the garden yourself?" she asked. "Why do you let Norrie take your place?"

Lovejoy picked up a buffer and ran it across her shining pink fingernails.

"If you think my place is out in the backyard, pulling up weeds with Tom, you're just plain goofy, Aunt Em!" she answered, and she laughed as she spoke.

But a half minute afterward she got up and sauntered into the baby's room at the back of the house. Through its open window she could see the backyard.

Tom and Norrie had spread an automobile blanket on the new grass and they were sitting on it with the baby between them.

"Better bring the baby into the house! It's damp out there on that grass!" Lovejoy called out to them. There was a sharp edge to her voice.

With a frown between her eyes she watched Norrie pick up the baby.

"And you, Tom! You've left Uncle James all alone downstairs!" she called to Tom. "You'd better come in and be polite to him!"

There was a little funny smile on Aunt Em's round high-colored face when Lovejoy went back to the room where she had left her.

"You know, Lovejoy," she said musingly, "the women that break up homes aren't always the beautiful shaky vampish ones. Sometimes they're just the women that wait on a man and listen to him and follow him around, doing things for him—I guess that's why so many men are in love with their stenographers!"

Lovejoy's gray eyes were filled with angry light as she turned upon her and her cheeks were scarlet.

Poker Party

"What are you trying to do, for heaven's sake? Turn me against Norrie Shane?" she flashed out at her. "Why Tom wouldn't look at Norrie or at anybody else so long as he had me—He thinks I'm Mary Pickford and Emily Post and Mrs. Rorer rolled into one!—Don't be silly, Aunt Em!"

On Saturday morning Tom announced that he was going to bring a few men home with him to play poker that night.

"Just see that there's plenty of ice and ginger-ale in the house," he told Lovejoy that morning when he came into her room to kiss her goodby. "And you might get some cheese and cold meat and rye bread in, too. There'll be seven of us—Al Alderson, some of the boys from the office and myself."

At 9 o'clock when Lovejoy went downstairs, dressed for the day, she found Norrie sitting at the dining room table making out the day's grocery list. Norrie had been doing all the marketing since she had come there to live.

"Order some cold meat and cheese and bread, Norrie, please," Lovejoy said to her. "Let's see, Tom wants some ginger ale too. He's going to have some men in for a game of poker tonight."

Her voice died away as her eyes fell upon the grocery list that lay on the table in front of Norrie.

For Norrie had written down all of the things that Tom wanted, already.

"Oh," she said sharply, "Tom told you what he wanted, didn't he?"

Norrie nodded her neat looking brown head. "Yes," she said in her gentle voice. "He told me at breakfast."

Telephones Steve

"Well, then, there's no need for me to bother you about it," Lovejoy answered, wondering how she kept her voice so smooth and even. "You just go ahead and order whatever he wants. I'm going downtown for the day, as soon as I get the housework done."

There was not very much to do. Norrie had put the lower floor into beautiful order. The new mirrors and the polished surfaces of the furniture shown like silver-cloth. There was not a thread on the new blue Chinese rugs. The breakfast dishes had been washed and put away.

At half past ten Lovejoy was opening the door of Dorby and Johansson's beauty shop downtown. Her week's allowance was in the bottom of her handbag, and in her heart was a firm determination to spend every nickel of it that day—on herself.

While she was waiting for an appointment with her favorite manicure she went into the little white-enameled telephone booth and called Tom at his office.

"Hello," she said crisply, "I won't be home tonight when you bring those men home for supper. But Norrie will be there—so just ask her for anything you want. She can do everything much better than I can, anyway."

She hung up the receiver before he had time to answer her.

Then she telephoned Stephen Oglebay.

Household Hints

If the cover of a knife-board wears out, a piece of linoleum may be used to replace it.

Silk stockings dry with a better finish if rinsed thoroughly in cold water to which a teaspoonful of vinegar has been added.

An easy way to dry curtains of net is to put them up on the rods when damp, stretch evenly and let dry in the folds into which they gracefully fall.

Home Comforts Before Lavish Fittings, Is Fay King's Suggestion

By FAY KING

HOME should be such a pleasant, congenial place we leave it reluctantly and return to it with pleasure.

Above all things it should be livable. Better cheaper furnishings which can be scarred and scratched.

A house that is too perfect, too correct in every detail, is as impersonal and uninspiring as a beautiful hotel room.

There is a difference between cozy untidiness, and slovenly neglect.

Expensive interior decorations can make a house attractive, but cannot make a home comfortable.

It is not cost, but comfort which counts.

The young man who appreciates a home will make a good husband.

Men are not impressed with the changing fads of house furnishings, but are creatures of habit and much prefer relaxation and contentment, among usable, livable home comforts.

NOT SO DUMB

By HELEN KLUMPH

From Marion Dawes' forthcoming All-Talking Picture by Wanda Tuchok and Edwin Justus Mayer, based on the play, "Dulcy," by Marc Connelly and George Kaufman.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Dulcy is an adorable blonde, always helping people—but usually into trouble. A serious quarrel with Gordon, her fiance, results from her determination to help him put over a business deal. Over his protests she goes to the train with him to meet Forbes, a financier, and invites him and his family to her house for a week-end. Gordon finds, to his horror, that she has a new butler who is an ex-convict, and that she has also invited an utter stranger named Van Dyke, and a scenario writer, Vincent Leach, who was in love with Angela. Gordon faces ruin as Forbes seems irritated upon arrival.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER V.

"WHAT an odd-looking butler," Mrs. Forbes whispered in Angela's direction as she started up the stairs after Perkins. "I don't recall ever seeing anyone like him."

To her surprise, it was not Angela, but Dulcy, who answered her.

"Oh, Perkins," Dulcy laughed, a little self-consciously. "Probably you never had a chance to see a bartender before Prohibition, did you?"

She hoped that she had diverted Mrs. Forbes' suspicions. People were so odd about Perkins. They didn't seem to have any sympathy for a poor man who would have spent years in jail if Dulcy hadn't gone to see the judge again and again, and induced him to put Perkins on probation and let him work for her.

For awhile she had entertained her friends by telling them how funny it was the afternoon she had interrupted a golf match to plead with the judge to let Perkins go, the judge had acted so queer. But several of her friends had stopped coming to her house, and Dulcy had decided that they just didn't appreciate the status of a man like Perkins. So many people were unsympathetic, or lacked a sense of humor.

Just as she started up the stairs, she caught sight of the beads which Angela was wearing.

"My, what a pretty necklace," she exclaimed, her eyes sparkling with enthusiasm. "It's new, isn't it? Does your father manufacture those pearls?"

A moment later her voice rose even higher in amazement.

"Real pearls! You don't mean to tell me that your father gave you real pearls! They must be worth a fortune. I always say that nobody knows your pearls are real nowadays until they are stolen and it gets into the newspaper."

Even if Perkins, plodding slowly up the stairs with the heavy bags, hadn't heard her the first time, he couldn't possibly have missed her as her voice rose on those last sentences. He shuddered, but he couldn't resist the temptation just to turn around and look, as he reached the landing. He set down the bags, when he was out of sight, as though they were afflicted with sudden itching. Then, as though struggling to brace himself for a difficult task, he went on.

Dulcy hesitated, watching the retreating back to Mrs. Forbes as she ascended the stairs, and clutched Angela's arm eagerly. She just couldn't keep her marvelous secret any longer.

"Angela," she said in an excited whisper, "Vincent Leach is here!"

She was somewhat surprised by the excitement with which Angela received that news, and the reply was not just what she had expected.

"Does father know?" Angela demanded, anxiously. "Has he seen him? How long is he going to stay?"

"Goose!" Dulcy pressed her arm affectionately. "He came down for the week end. And he didn't come to see your father!"

"But father—" Angela protested. "He's awfully funny about people. He seems to have a grudge against all the most perfectly divine people."

"Oh, well," laughed Dulcy. "Just leave it to me. I'm going to fix everything for you."

She ran up the stairs, calling gaily to Mrs. Forbes, but Angela lingered, worried.

Her father had been distinctly cross when he found out that she had had tea with Vincent Leach just the other day. Father was just a business man, and he didn't understand artists at all. It wasn't her fault that he had found a page of a script Vincent had given to her to read and had thought it was a love letter. Her father was simply impossible; he never gave anyone a chance to explain.

If he had only listened to her, he would have found out that it couldn't be a love letter, because she had never had a chance to go drifting languidly in a gondola with Vincent while he read her poems of passions, the way the man and the girl in his story did. They didn't have gondolas in the hotel where she had been meeting him for tea while her father thought she was at the dentist's.

But, oh! if she could only float through the moonlight with Vincent. She fairly swooned at the thought.

Bill's arrival at that moment was an abrupt break in her musings.

"Hullo, Angela."

Her answer was noticably lacking in enthusiasm.

"You don't have to be afraid of me, you know." Bill's matter-of-fact voice broke into the song in her heart. "I'm all over the mumps and my other childhood diseases."

Every word he said increased her irritation.

"It's just like you to talk about the mumps the first time we meet again," she blurted out. "After we haven't seen each other since—"

"Since you gave me the air." Bill was truthful even when it hurt him. "And now that you've brought that up," he went on, earnestly, "I never did understand why you ditched me so abruptly, Angela."

"No, you wouldn't understand." She was frankly scornful. "You haven't an atom of romance in your soul."

Bill was not a romantic figure; he was more of a vo-de-o-do-do type. Even when most serious, as he was at this moment, he looked as if he were on the verge of discovering some hilarious joke.

"That's where you're wrong," he insisted. "I've any number of dreams stuffed in my head—but I'm scared to talk about them."

Angela sought to dismiss the whole affair with a wave of the hand, saying, "Well, it doesn't matter now, anyway. You see, I'm in love again."

That "again" was the only encouragement Bill had had in weeks. If he could only get her to talk about it, maybe he would get a hint of where he had failed.

"With a romantic chap?" he asked. "I mean a chap who talks about romance?"

It was not the moment to criticise Angela's hero. Bill realized that too late.

"Oh, what's the use of talking to you?" Angela was poised for flight up the stairs. "YOU can't understand that a woman wants someone to tell her how wonderful she is—whether she is or not—and sweep her off her feet and carry her away and—"

While she paused, wondering just what she did want, Bill made a suggestion.

"And live unhappily ever afterward?"

Angela was close to tears. Bill always seemed to get the best of her. She stamped her foot angrily and ran up the stairs, declaring, "Oh, I hate you!"

Bill was subdued for a minute. But, after all, one quarrel didn't end everything. He had seen Dulcy and Gordon survive lots of them and afterward they always seemed more devoted than ever. He could always seek consolation in the garden from Mother Nature, the only perfect woman in the world because she couldn't talk back.

Angela felt more at peace with Dulcy. Dulcy understood romance. But Dulcy seemed to have other things on her mind. She had no more than shown Angela to her room when she excused herself to join the men in the garden.

"I must go down and see that they are enjoying themselves," she called, as she hurried toward the stairs. "Besides, I want to talk to your father about something."

"Not about me!" Angela called after her, entreatingly, and Bill in the hall below, hearing her, exclaimed "Oh, kind heaven, not about me!" And Perkins, recalling the pearls, ejaculated "Cripes, not about me!" under his breath.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

When Man Proposes

AFTER a girl has tried all the other known ways to bring a man to the proposing point, she can nearly always succeed, at the last minute, by "giving him up"—for another man.

Many a man who prides himself on his brilliant eloquence has found that the four little words, "Will you marry me?" just stick in his throat and leave him inarticulate.

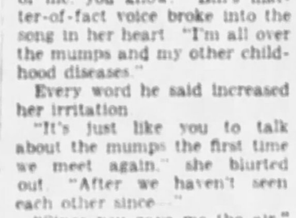
Lots of women have begun making their own dresses these days, which must be quite a shock to the style-dictators who started them back on the road to mid-Victorianism. But then, as the salesgirl says, it's "SO feminine!"

* * *

Nothing so amazes a wife as to discover that the man who is too "helpless" to fix his own eggs and sweeten his own coffee at home is known among his fishing cronies as the "best cook and dishwasher" in camp.



* * *

Half-long hair may make a flapper look only a little frowsy; but when a middle-aged woman tries it she looks like nothing so much as Boadicea after a hard fight.

It takes more strength of will than any normal woman possesses to say "NO" to a man she loves when he pleads for "another chance," "another "kiss," or another helping of the food that disagrees with him.

The old-fashioned woman used to keep her marriage certificate in a gilt frame on the wall. But in these days almost any good gilt frame will outlast two or three marriage certificates.

All those jokes may be true about a woman's inability to throw a ball straight, but her aim always seems to be accurate when she starts out to shoot her husband.

LOVE'S AWAKENING

A Continuation of Love's Embers

By ADELE GARRISON

Georges and Princess Betrothed and Returned to Own

PRINCE GEORGES' second swoon was more stubborn than the one from which C——'s kiss had roused him. But his youth and his magnificent physique were potent aids to our frantic ministrations and by the time a physician arrived, he had again recovered consciousness, and we had succeeded in stopping the bleeding from his wound. But we were an anxious group as we waited for the physician's verdict.

"It's one of the miracles," he said when he had finished his work and the young prince, pallid but comfortable was resting in his bed. "If the knife had not been deflected by the other young man, this one would have taken it right in the heart. As it is, he will only have to undergo a rather painful and somewhat deep flesh wound. If he had not had a recent injury to his head he would not even have lost consciousness. In a week or ten days he will be all right again."

"I was so sure that they were double-crossing us, and meant that Georges should not leave the room alive," said Harry Underwood later in the morning, "that we did not wait for Georges' signal but opened the wall panel and stole into the room as the knock sounded on the door. Georges kept behind the door when he opened it as I had directed him, and that saved him, for the leader of the three men who rushed in—they said there would be but one — remember — lunged out immediately with a knife. But, of course, it did not reach him, and the rest of us were able to take them by surprise. Wildcats had nothing on them, though." He touched a bandaged arm gingerly.

"If it hadn't been for mah woman over there," Dicky nodded to me with a look of conjugal pride that set my pulses thrilling, "we might be facing tragedy after all our precautions."

"Don't, Dicky!" I pleaded. "When I think that my not noticing that difference in the teeth of those two people nearly resulted—" I gave a little shiver and Lillian clapped me on the shoulder.

"Tin the shivers," she advised, "and take a bow instead. Remember you did recall it in time, and saved the day. That fellow was the gem of the collection, though. He must have been a master of makeup. You see he counted on dashing over the roof, catching the girls unawares, killing them and beating it back to the bungalow. Once there he could have put on his disguise again and posed as the old woman for days if necessary."

"How is the poor old soul?" Harry asked. "I haven't had time to ask you what you got out of her. But having had experience with the gentleman who impersonated her, I can guess most of her story. He's the brains of the whole bunch, the lad I've been wanting to land for years. Unfortunately he also has wanted to land me, and knowing that I would be here this winter, he came to the hotel several weeks ago and took a room near the roof. He tipped lavishly and evidently found a garrulous soul—maid or bell boy who told him of the oddities of different tenants. The old woman who hated men and who never left her apartment, of course, was cherry pie for him. But I'd like to hear the details of how he worked it."

"He paid the maid who took care of the bungalows to quit her job and let him have her uniform. He was so clever that he impersonated that maid for several days—she wore glasses, had short hair and used a lot of rouge—without anyone suspecting the change. With free access to the bungalow he soon discovered that hidden closet which the old woman had had built so long ago that the management, changed several times since, did not know of it. It was easy to overpower her, to copy her appearance meticulously, and to impersonate her. He seemed to have had some little streak of mercy in his make-up, for he only gagged her and deposited her in the hidden closet when it was necessary for him to appear at the door. The rest of the time he permitted her as much freedom as he dared. I don't believe she will be any the worse for her experience."

"She'll be better," Lillian said with a little laugh. "She's had the thrill of a lifetime and she'll have a never-failing topic of conversation for the lonely years to come. No old soldier recounting battles will have anything on her. But—how about it—old dear?"—she looked at her husband. "No slip in anything? Scheme entirely successful?"

"One hundred per cent," Harry Underwood said enthusiastically. "I am going to give those lads downstairs an unofficial third degree before turning them over for deportation back to Trees — they're aliens, every one of 'em, not a birth certificate or a naturalization paper among 'em, and I'm shouting sure Georges can sleep o'nights for the rest of his life as far as Kenellos is concerned."

"Which is more than Phil Veritzen can do," Lillian said, adding viciously: "I wonder what the old buzzard is hatching."

For Philip Veritzen had gone to his own apartment as soon as the physician had pronounced Prince Georges out of danger, gone in the dazed slumped fashion of a man who has received an unexpected blow. In the space of a second when Noel had swept Mary into his eager arms, he had seen the thwarting of an overweening ambition.

"I fancy we won't have to wait long for the answer to that," Dicky said; and indeed it was less than 10 minutes when Noel came back into the room, his face pallid and lined and his eyes dull with pain. Mary who had just come from the room where she had cajoled Olina into slumber, rushed up to him and seized his arm.

"Don't look like that!" she cried, with rough tenderness. "There isn't any father in the world worth it. Besides, I'm here."

She stressed the pronoun, further emphasized it by striking her chest with a prettily clenched fist. But Noel did not smile.

"I wouldn't care for myself," he told her fondly, "but he's . . ."

"Don't pain yourself telling your news," she retorted flippantly. "I know it already and see if I care. He's thrown me out on my ear, and disin-her-ited you. All you've got is that little bit he can't take away from you by your mother's will. That it?"

Noel nodded miserably, and Mary put her hands on each side his cheeks, pulled his head down and kissed him, as regardless of Harry, Dicky, Lillian and me, as if we had been the chairs upon which we sat.

"That for you, and that"—she snapped her fingers—"for him," she said. "We're not old enough to get married anyway—I'm certain Auntie Madge would forbid the banns if we attempted it—and all we've got to do is to buckle down to work and show your autocratic sire that we can get along without him."

"But you were to be a Veritzen star, Mary," Noel said.

"I'm going to be something better, if you don't object—a Veritzen wife," Mary said audaciously—then danced away from his clutching hands. "Better deliver that paper you've got there before you lose it."

"My father sent it to you," he said, and Mr. Underwood tore it open, read its few words quickly, frowned, and then laughed.

"Listeh to this cry of a broken heart," he said; and there was in his voice the contempt, though tinged with pity which I think all of us felt toward the great dramatic producer.

"My life has been ruined by the ingratitude of those closest to me," the note began. "I am going away until I can pull myself together. I do not know how long I shall be gone. Underwood, will you act as my personal representative at Miller's salary until I come back?—If I ever come back. I shall send a wire to Miller, who will continue as my business manager, to make you a contract at that salary for a year. I desire Mrs. Graham to keep on with her work as I have outlined it. You and she and Miller and Harkins ought to be able to carry on. You will continue the productions already running, and finish the work on the two now in preparation, but you will not produce them nor start any others until you hear from me.

"As for my son, he is my son no longer. He will do exactly as he pleases from now on, but he will receive no aid from me. And as his actions show that his judgment is faulty, I shall not permit him to handle the funds entrusted to me for him. In the event of my death, he will of course inherit that money. My own property I shall dispose of as I see fit. But if he is ill or in any urgent need, let me know.

"Miss Mary Harrison is no longer in my employ."

"(Signed) Philip Veritzen."

Mr. Underwood raised his head from the paper and looked with comradely affection at Philip Veritzen's son.

"Where is your father, Noel?" he demanded. "I'm going over and shake him until his back teeth rattle—or fall out. I've always suspected that perfect bridge work."

"He's gone," Noel said miserably. "He telephoned Otto to meet him, put some things in a handbag, told me to give up the apartment, and hurried out."

"No chance then," Mr. Underwood said despondently, looking at his outspread fingers. "But how I'd like to use these on him!"

"I'd be the cheer leader while you were doing it," I said viciously, and without my volition as the words left my lips, my eyes felt Dicky's compellingly upon them, and I looked up to see him smiling at me with his old happy companionable grin. My open disapproval of my employer, I saw, had been the one thing necessary to complete the temporary banishment of what Lillian termed his "chronic grouch over old Phil." Based upon his unreasoning jealousy of the great producer, it might return at any time, but at least for the term of Mr. Veritzen's absence I might hope to be free from it.

His name was not mentioned by either of us again, until a day several weeks later when we returned from the ship which carried Princess Olina back to her mother and royal home. She traveled as "Eleanor Jackson" and was accompanied by the faithful Schmidts whom she had summoned back to New York. Prince Georges had gone back to his country as soon as he was able to travel, and we a few days later, had read with excited little thrills the news of his accession to the throne of Trees upon his old uncle's death. We knew from the lips of both our young royal visitors that the period of mourning would be followed by their wedding and we were all insistently invited to come to Trees for the event which would make Olina a queen. But while we promised, we knew that it was a pledge which it would be better not to keep.

"The international romantic quartet is a pleasant memory now," Dicky said when we had left Olina. "It wouldn't be so Christmassy if Queen Olga had the opportunity to turn the well-known eagle eye and cold shoulder upon the other halves of the sketch."

"The other halves are so happy, nothing could disturb them," I said, watching Noel and Mary walking ahead of us, close together, and absorbed in each other in the pretty way of very youthful lovers.

Dicky glanced quickly around and saw as I did that Harry and Lillian were far enough away so that they could not hear us. And nobody else on the pier was paying any attention to us.

"You sound a bit envious, or I hope so," Dicky said softly, catching at my hand. "Look here! I've been beastly about that old fool, Veritzen, but you've run me a bit ragged about Ede, too. And you ought to know I'm still off my nut about you. Don't you think we could, you could—"

It was not the wooing of my girlhood, or the romantic tenderness of our early reconciliations. But there was something in its rough tenderness which stirred me tremendously, and I nestled my hand closer into his.

"I think we could," I whispered.

Mack Lineup Uncertain. Changes Are Planned. Boley and Bishop Slip.

Dinner Aid to Sports. Brings Pitt-Army Game. Cricket Has Its Ruth.

NO POST FIXED IN ATHLETIC INFIELD

RARELY has the make-up of a world champion baseball club been so uncertain for the season following its titular triumph as is that of the Philadelphia Athletics for 1930. As a general rule, a team that has proved itself sufficiently powerful to win a pennant and the championship of the globe is considered good enough to warrant a stand-pat policy on the part of its manager. But not so with the A's in the eyes of Connie Mack. The veteran general is planning to make several shifts if he can find among his new spring candidates the grade of talent required to render the proposed changes possible.

Connie Mack

There is no doubt about the outfield, of course. Al Simmons, George Haas and Bing Miller will continue to patrol the pastures. Mickey Cochrane will again be the mainstay behind the bat, with some occasional relief by Wally Schang, and the old pitching staff will remain on the job with perhaps an addition or two from a string of recruits made up of Lee Roy Mahaffey, George Snider, Alfred Jones, John McGrew, Glenn Leibhardt and Alfred Mahon.

BUT the infield is far from being set. This may show changes all around. An assertion that not one of the four inner-defense positions on a club that won a world championship less than four months ago is fixed beyond question may sound like an exaggeration, but Mack himself admits that such is the case with the White Elephants.

At least two of the old regulars will be in there somewhere; possibly all four of them in the end if better men are not uncovered for a pair of the posts. There is no telling. But right now there is no certainty that any particular player will be assigned to any particular place. It's an open question from first base to third, and only the spring training campaign in Fort Myers, Fla., can bring the answer. Mack's decision will be governed by what develops during that period.

CONNIE had a satisfactory defensive array in the world series with Jimmy Foxx at first base, Max Bishop at second, Jimmy Dykes at third and Joe Boley at short.

But the boss of the A's makes no secret of the fact that he would feel more secure for 1930 if he could replace Boley and Bishop. A weak throwing arm handicaps the former, and Bishop's batting has fallen off wofully as a result of some eye trouble.

Joe Boley

THE desire to find two new players who will be more dependable than Boley and Bishop has put all of the infield jobs up in the air. Eric McNair, a flashy youngster who hit .391 for Knoxville, Tenn., last year, may supplant Boley in the shortfield, and if Jim Keesey, Portland recruit, with a batting mark of .349, can make good at first base Mack will move Foxx over to third and shift Dykes to second. There is also a possibility that Foxx and Dykes will stay at their old places and that Debrill Williams, from Little Rock, Roger Cramer from Martinsburg, or Roy Tarr, from McCook, may beat out Bishop for the midway position. Boley's job in particular appears to be in danger, judging from the showing made by McNair after he joined the Mackmen last fall. All around, it is one of the most unusual situations ever presented by a title-holding team.

NOT only was the second annual sports dinner given by Pittsburgh Chapter, Baseball Writers' Association of America, in Pirate Hall at the William Penn Hotel last night a brilliant success in itself, but it may have far-reaching effects for the good of the sport cause in general. The contacts of sport leaders made possible by such gatherings often have important results. That is they lead to meetings, discussions, suggestions and agreements that would not have developed otherwise.

Though not generally known, it was the first banquet held by the Pittsburgh writers a year ago that gave to this city what promises to be the high spot in local football history—the coming of the Army team to meet Pitt at The Stadium in 1931. Biff Jones, then coach at West Point, was a guest and speaker at that dinner, and so was Jock Sutherland. Eventually they got together in a corner, the subject of a Pitt-Army game was brought up and before they parted the way was paved for the clinching of the big contest.

DOC EASTMAN, who has been guiding Gabby Hartnett at a Chicago gymnasium this winter in the Cub catcher's effort to restore his throwing arm to form for the 1930 baseball season, says there is no doubt that Hartnett will be successful in his attempted comeback.

Eastman has been catching Gabby's throws in the gymnasium workouts and declares that the backstop is now able to peg the ball around with all of the speed and power he showed in his best days before his arm was injured.

Gabby Hartnett

"My hands are all puffed from catching Hartnett's throws," said Eastman to Jim Crusinberry. "I thought it was going to be fun to play catch with him every afternoon in the gymnasium. It's no longer fun. He can knock my glove off my hand, and I was a pretty good ball player dot so long ago. He can peg as hard now as he ever could and he doesn't get a sore arm from his efforts. That makes it look like he's cured. It should not be different when he starts working in the open air. Hartnett has one trouble, and it may have been the cause of his arm ailment. He's got too much enthusiasm for his own good. You know he just can't help cutting loose when he feels the urge. Now he must watch himself. He must learn to curb his spirit rather than feed it. He must learn to save that arm."

GLOVE fighters may batter each other unmercifully during a battle, each unsparing in his efforts to pound his opponent into a state of helplessness, but underneath they are friends and never forget that it is merely a sporting contest. An incident demonstrating the truth of this is related by Tom Dyer, trainer of the Chicago National League hockey team.

Dyer, a globe-trotter and veteran of eight years' service in the British army, is himself a former boxer. He won the welterweight championship of Australia and fought in the semi-windup on the Jack Johnson-Tommy Burns card in Sydney in 1908. The subject of his narrative was the 15-round bout in which Willie Lewis won the decision over Sid Russell in Paris on December 31, 1909, New Year's Eve.

"IT WAS one of the best fights I ever saw," Dyer told Wade Franklin. "The men had been clubbing each other until their faces

Akron Franchise Declared Forfeited

DAYTON, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—The franchise of the Akron baseball team in the Central League was officially ordered forfeited by officials of the circuit, in session here last night. Specific charges against Akron were that its baseball organization and conduct was "detrimental to the wellbeing, promotion and sportsmanship of the game."

Akron was not represented at the meeting. Efforts will be made to get Richmond, Ind., to accept the franchise.

GRIMES STEALS SHOW, GETS BIG OVATION

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Feasting and entertainment of a high order marked the second annual dinner of Pittsburgh Chapter, Baseball Writers' Association of America, held at the William Penn Hotel, last night. Men prominent in the active field of sportive endeavor blended their oratorical efforts with those high in the councils of organized recreation. Upwards of 700 attended.

The characters noted for their gift of public speaking lived up to their reputations, yet it was left for an actual player of the Grand Old baseball game to "steal the show." This feat was accomplished beautifully by Burleigh Grimes, star pitcher of the Pirates, the veteran being accorded one of the greatest ovations ever given an athlete in Pittsburgh.

GRIMES STEALS SHOW

Grimes, for some reason, has captured the fancy of Pittsburgh fans; doubtless his aggressiveness and willingness to work under any conditions have endeared him to the patrons of the sport in this section. When he arose he was applauded so wildly and long that Burleigh had to stand smilingly in the spotlight making gestures to hush the tumult. Eventually he was able to do this and then he launched into an interesting talk.

In a laughing, but perhaps meaningful, manner, Burleigh touched on his own unsigned status with the Pirates. Previous to Grimes' talk, Sam Dreyfuss, vice president of the Pirates, had referred to the fairness which the Pittsburgh officials had always tried to use in dealing with players. Burleigh commented on the statement of the club official, the tenor of his remarks being that he has been fair in his dealings with the various teams who held his services.

All in all, Burleigh's appearance was the highest spot of the evening, although a certain Senator Mulcahy from Philadelphia also took the banqueters by storm. The Senator proved to be a dialect monologist of exceptional merit, his Irish and English tales easily being the best spot in the evening's fun. Mr. Mulcahy, it is to be hoped, will be back again soon. He's one of the best ever heard in these parts.

WILSON INTERESTING

Not so far behind Grimes in popularity was Lewis (Hack) Wilson, the Martinsburg Mauler, who made a short, but interesting talk. Hack also received a big reception when he was introduced. The ruddy-faced little giant was one of the most popular figures on the dais. Hack was called upon to sign scores of small bats and other souvenirs before being called on to regale the audience. The appealing member of the Cub champions told several funny stories that went over big with the crowd.

Attorney Joseph N. Mackrell again proved an excellent toastmaster. A former newspaperman, Joe was in the same role one year ago. Last night he had a more difficult task, as he had a long list of speakers as well as many other features under his control, yet he ran off the lengthy lineup in a clever way.

The program was tinged with sorrowful procedure on two occasions. Immediately after he had pronounced the invocation, Bishop Alexander Mann spoke a solemn eulogy on Louis H. Wollen, Pittsburgh baseball writer who passed away last Christmas Day. A large picture of the departed writer was uncovered as taps sounded. Later in the evening, Toastmaster Mackrell asked for a silent tribute to A. W. Stevenson, assistant football coach of the University of Pittsburgh, who died this week.

Frank Wiener, chairman of the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission, gave the throng an idea as to how the commissions works. Wiener devoted much of his talk to Commissioner Havey J. Boyle, member of the athletic board since its inception. Boyle was introduced to the guests.

The one and only Honus Wagner was saved as the last speaker of the evening. As usual, the famed Flying Dutchman of Carnegie was in a delightful mood, his tales of the diamond having a gripping interest.

LANDIS, HEYDLER TALK

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, was one of the first celebrities to be introduced, but the white-haired judge was not listed as a speaker, at his own request. The crowd, however, would not consent to silence on the part of the big boss of the game. Landis eventually listened to the pleas of the gathering by making a short talk. The assemblage gave Landis a big ovation.

John A. Heydler, president of the National League, followed Landis on the program. Prexy Heydler gave a serious talk on the game that was highly interesting. Heydler dwelt on the wonderful qualities of the diamond game in a manner typical of this sterling character of the sport.

Sam Dreyfuss confined most of his address to his favorite team. He touched on several stars of the

TEX IS SENT TO NEW HAVEN ICE TEAM

By CARL W. SHATTO

Tex White, veteran wingman of the Pittsburgh Hockey Club, has been transferred to the New Haven Club, of the Eastern League, Manager Frank Frederickson announced today. White, who helped Pittsburgh to win a few national amateur championships before graduating to the local pro club, is to leave tonight to join his new mates.

Tex is to remain with New Haven for the remainder of the season, and the Eastern League outfit will have the privilege of purchasing him outright at the close of the campaign should it elect to do so.

FREDDIE TO TOUR

Pilot Frederickson also is to leave the city tonight, for a trip through Canada and the Mid-West in quest of new ice talent. He expects to see some 15 clubs in action during the next two weeks, and is confident that he will be able to sign enough young stars to make the Pirates a title contender next season.

Garry Schmeelk will play the dual role of club secretary and manager during Frederickson's absence, and he will be assisted by Hib Milks, star forward, who will direct the team on the ice.

BUCS LEAVE TOMORROW

The Bucs are to leave for Detroit tomorrow for a battle with the Cougars on Sunday. From Detroit they will go to Fort Erie, Ont., where they will take on the Boston Bruins on Wednesday in a game originally carded to be played here tomorrow. On the following Saturday the locals will be the guests of the Maroons in Montreal.

The Pirates will not appear at Duquesne Garden again until February 20, when the Toronto Leafs will appear here.

HALL PRESSED TO ADVANCE

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Twice within a single point of defeat, Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., co-favorite with Frank Hunter, for national indoor tennis championship, gained a hard-won place in the semi-final round of the title tournament at the Seventh Regiment Armory yesterday.

Ed Jenkins, New York youth, caught the former Canadian indoor champion off his guard and had him tottering on the brink of defeat before Hall finally took control and pulled out the match at 9-11, 13-11, 6-0.

Qualifying to meet Hall in the semi-finals today, Julio Seligson, Lehigh student, eliminated Harris Coggeshall, of Des Moines, Ia., 6-1, 6-2.

In the other half, Hunter defeated Eugene McCauliff, 8-6, 8-6. Against Herbert Bowman, Rockafellow, produced something of a surprise by winning by scores of 6-4, 6-3.

Eight Giant Stars Remain Unsigned

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—(INS.)—With eight players unsigned, the New York Giants were preparing today for their departure for spring training at San Antonio, Tex., on February 15.

The eight holdouts are Billy Terry, Travis Jackson, Fred Lindstrom, Melvin Ott, Fred Leach, Bob O'Farrell, Bill Walker and Jack Scott, practically the backbone of the team.

All, however, were expected to come to terms within the next few days, excepting possibly Terry, who is called a "determined holdout."

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—(INS.)—Babe Herman, the hitting and fielding star of the Brooklyn Dodgers, is a holdout, it was learned today, and demands a $25,000 yearly salary. He has been offered $15,000. It is understood.

MADGE BOXES TIGER JOE TONIGHT

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor

Two hard-hitting welterweights, Larry Madge, of Cleveland, and Tiger Joe Randall, of Elizabeth, clash in the 10-round main bout at the Moose Temple tonight. They are not fancy stylists, but they can sock—and Promoter Francis Flynn believes that is what his customers like most. It should be a tough battle.

Joe Zink, of McKees Rocks, and Danny Russell, of Braddock, and formerly of Baltimore, box the six-round semi-final and Georgie Chambers, of the East End, meets Jack Wilson, of Jersey City, subbing for Billy Flanagan, of Clearfield, in the second event, while Johnny Montabano, of Braddock, makes his professional debut against Paul Balint, of the North Side, in the opener.

Between Rounds

Promoter Jim McGirr, of McKeesport, has matched Billy Jones, local 175-pound heavyweight, who had to go away from home to make good, with Frank Florian, of Cleveland, for his main bout here Thursday night. Florian comes highly recommended having boxed K. O. Christner, Ernest Rocco, Bony Douglas, Harold Kearney, Frank Moody and Tiny Debolt, among others.

Tommy Watson, of Kansas City, will box Babe Ruth, of Louisville, in the main bout at the Jolly Bowl, New Castle, next Monday night. Red Jadanhill and George Perotta will be seen in the semi-final.

Eddie Brannon, Negro featherweight of the Hill district, fights Frankie Blattnick, of Cleveland, in the eight-round main bout of a show at East Liverpool, O., next Tuesday night.

The Pastorious A. C., of McKees Rocks, will stage its second wrestling show in Lithuanian Hall next Monday night. Sparky Ewall will be one of the principals in the main bout.

REISELT TAKES LEAD

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Winning both books yesterday, Otto Reiselt, of Philadelphia, went into the lead in his three-cushion billiard match with Walker Cochran, of Hollywood. Reiselt now leads 400 to 384.

WICHITA HURLER TO GET TRYOUT WITH BUCS

The Pirates added another pitcher to their staff today, under a conditional arrangement. The local office announced that it had secured permission to try out Herman Sanders, righthand pitcher of the Wichita Club of the Western League. Sanders will be taken to Paso Robles with the other batterymen and in the event of his showing well, negotiations will be continued with Wichita with a view of purchasing the hurler for a stated sum.

NOT NOVICE

Sanders is not a novice by any means; he is aged 28 and has had considerable experience, but has been held back through sickness. For two years he has been an impressive sharpshooter for the Wichiaa team, he winning 16 and losing 16 last season under a severe handicap. He pitched the season with a tumor on his right foot and with infected tonsils. He has since undergone operations for the removal of the tumor and tonsils.

EXCELLENT RECORD

Almost six feet in height, Sanders is a slim athlete weighing only 168. He fanned 96 batters and walked 81 in his last campaign. The recruit played with Omaha in 1926 and with Amarillo in 1927. He is a lefthand hitter.

Sonnenberg Winner Over John Freberg

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Gus Sonnenberg, world heavyweight wrestling champion, won two straight falls from John Freberg, of Minneapolis, last night.

Sonnenberg pinned Freberg's shoulders to the mat with flying tackles, the first one in 7 minutes 48 seconds, and the second in 38 minutes 29 seconds.

Baby to Make No Difference In Walkers' Strife

PASADENA, Feb. 7.—(INS.)—Mickey Walker's 10-day old baby, Patricia Ann Walker, will not be able to restore peace in the family of the middleweight champion, it was revealed today.

"There is no prospect of my making up with Mickey," said Mrs. Walker, in a local hospital. "I did get a nice telegram of congratulation from him when little Patricia was born—but then he turns around and makes a statement that the reason we separated was because I spent most of his money. That isn't true."

Mrs. Walker filed suit for divorce against her husband in Jersey City recently.

ASK $2,000 FOR CLUB

HARRISBURG, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—The Harrisburg franchise of the New York-Pennsylvania League yesterday was finally tossed on the baseball bargain counter with a price tag marked "$2,000." That was the price asked by President W. J. Bridges, Jr., of the Harrisburg Athletic Club, in offering the franchise to Peter R. Pottroff, new president of the league, or any other interested person.

Sport Vignettes

One of the most human stories I have heard at the orgy of football banquets following the recent season was told by a youth, the retiring captain of the Clairton High School team, which won the W. P. I. A. L. championship..... It had to do with a halfback who was carrying the ball on a long run up the field..... His mother, his sister and his best girl were sitting in the grandstand looking on..... As he started off, his best girl let out a shriek and yelled: "Oh, look, he's all cut and bleeding!" As he came closer, his sister exclaimed: "I think his nose is broken!"..... As he was tackled hard and the boys piled on top of him, his ma beamed proudly and cried joyfully: "Look, he didn't drop the ball!" ..... More mature speakers have orated long and loud without driving home a point on the human emotions as well..... Then there was the story, told at the same banquet by the Clairton coach, about the fellow who was sitting on the beach in the moonlight with his girl. Neither spoke for a while and finally a gust of wind came along and blew sand over them... Still no conversation..... Then the sweet young thing chirped up and demanded, "John, why don't you say something?"..... John: "I can't, my mouth's full of sand."..... S. Y. T.: "Swallow it—you need it!"—HARRY KECK.

CARNERA S.OPS OWENS IN SECOND ROUND

PRIMO SHOWS SPEED AGAINST INDIAN FOE

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Primo Carnera, the ambling Alp from Italy, experimented for a round last night with Cowboy Billy Owens for the entertainment of a crowd of 8,000 that jammed the Armory here, and then proceeded to roll over the Cherokee Indian from Guthrie, Okla., with all the venom and co-operation that marked the sudden finishes of Big Boy Peterson and Elzear Rioux.

For a round, Primo, the good-natured gigantic gondola man of Venice, actually boxed with the shaking 220-pounder chosen as his third opponent in America and the medium for his debut before the New Jersey faithful.

He furnished a most interesting picture, galloping about the ring with great speed, shoving forth ponderous left jabs, crossing laboriously with his right and even wrestling and blocking scientifically in clinches that seemed greatly appreciated by the Red Man.

PRIMO TRIES HARD

To prove that he was trying his hardest, exerting all the slow freight power that blasted Peterson from his path in 1 minute 10 seconds, and Rioux in 47 seconds, Carnera turned from clinches apologetically at times and shook his head to the howling, laughing audience. Toward the end of the round, when Owens stood up surprisingly well under several of Primo's heaves to the head and body, Carnera sparred at long range, his white teeth and broad red gums gleaming through a half-smile, the muscles of his 276-pound body rippling under the lights.

Apparently satisfied that the display had gone far enough with the closing gong for the first round, Primo galloped out of his corner for the second, threw both hands in piston fashion into Owens' head. Immediately the dark-skinned Cowboy's knees began to buckle, he wobbled, clutched desperately and then landed full on his shoulders as a ponderous right smote him full on the chin.

GENARO FOULS STEIN

BERLIN, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Frankie Genaro, of New York, threw away his chances for an easy victory when he was disqualified for fouling in the seventh round of a scheduled 10-round fight with Harry Stein, of Germany, here last night.

Genaro, weighing 113 pounds, conceded Stein seven pounds, and apparently was coasting in to an easy triumph when the referee stepped in and awarded the decision to the German. Genaro had been warned several times for alleged low punching. Some boxing critics in the audience of 10,000 thought that Genaro's punches were fair and that he was the victim of an unjust decision, but the large majority jeered the American and loudly cheered the referee's action.

ROBBED OF KAYO

Stein, towering some six or seven inches above the little American, absorbed some heavy body punishment throughout the fight. The German's height forced Genaro to concentrate almost entirely on the body. In the fifth round Genaro floored Stein for the full count, but instead of allowing a knockout, the referee, evidently thinking the blow had been low, gave Stein a one minute rest.

Two Californians Reach Golf Final

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—The last hope of an invader winning the mid-winter (southern California women's golf tournament was in the discard today as Mrs. Gregg Lifur and Mrs. Leona Pressler, both of Los Angeles, went to the tee for the final round.

The tournament became an all-California affair when Mrs. Pressler, who is favored to defeat Mrs. Lifur, eliminated Mrs. C. J. Woerner, of Los Angeles, 7 and 6, and Mrs. Lifur defeated Miss Beatrice Gottlieb, formerly of New York, 2 and 1.

BOB KEENAN — HACK WILSON — JACOB JENNY

Keenan and Jenny last night put on a Primo Carnera act as a novelty feature of the annual banquet of the Pittsburgh chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America in the William Penn Hotel. Grafton Duvall, as the "manager" of Carnera (Keenan), demanded of Chairman Frank Wiener, of the State Athletic Commission, why his man could not get a license to box in this state. Everything went along lovely until Jenny, a midget, offered to take on the 7-foot 1-inch "battler." Hack Wilson, Cubs' star, is a big fellow, but he doesn't look that way compared with Keenan, who is several inches taller than Carnera.

Chick Meehan, head coach of the New York University football team, gave the banqueteers a good flavor in a short, snappy talk. Chick took occasion to state that the football teams representing Pittsburgh rank with the best and the cleverest in the land.

County Commissioner E. V. Babcock paid his respects to all sorts of sports.

Judge Frank P. Patterson, of Common Pleas Court, devoted much of his speech to a eulogy of John H. Gruber, dean of official scorers. Gruber has been at his post for 36 years.

Dr. Charles Reitell, of the University of Pittsburgh, entertained and instructed the gathering with his address on wild life. Dr. Reitell represented the Isaak Walton clubs of this district. These lovers of the outdoors were numerous throughout the vast banquet hall. John G. Mock, well-known local sportsman, led a big delegation to the sport feast.

FREDERICKSON IMPRESSIVE

Frank Fredericksen, manager of the Pittsburgh hockey team, made a marked impression on the guests with an address of unusual quality. The skating star dwelt on the various phases of the ice game.

Toastmaster Mackrell brought the long evening's entertainment to a close by introducing more than a score of prominent personages in the big audience.

Izzy Cervone's American Legion orchestra was on hand early and these musicians added much to the occasion with their fine renditions. Joe Gould, a clever monologist, added to the gayety of the occasion with his bright quips.

The guests departed after the benediction was given by Rabbi Benjamin A. Lichter.

IDAHO COACH INJURED

GRANTS PASS, Ore., Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Thrown from his automobile when it collided with a truck on the highway near here, Charles Erb, former football coach at the University of Idaho, was injured seriously yesterday. Erb, as quarterback, piloted the University of California football teams of 1920, 1921 and 1922.

SPRINT ACES TO MEET

PITT LEAVES TONIGHT FOR SOUTH BEND

By JESS CARVER

For the third time this week, the Tristate Conference, operating on a six-team basis only until the close of the present scholastic year, will put on a feature act, by bringing together Westminster and Geneva in the new Memorial Hall in New Brighton tonight.

The conference has kept basketball interest at a peak this week by offering a very notable layout of ball games. The action started Monday when Bethany invaded New Wilmington and took one on the point of the lug, thereby permitting the Titans to slip into undisputed leadership of the league. The next evening, which happened to be Tuesday, Duquesne went down to Beaver Falls and laughingly took Ken Loeffler and his Geneva Covenanters for a ride, slipping into a draw with the United Presbyterians.

ROSY FOR U. P.

Now then, if Westminster can continue the pace, and take Geneva again tonight, all will be rosy with the U. P.'s, and when all is rosy with U. P.'s, it is rosy indeed.

Geneva figured to beat the Dukes, and by the same token, do not figure to beat Westminster. Hittin' on all five, as the New Wilmington boys seem to be right now, there isn't a tougher outfit in the district to beat. When you have gents like Ken Delahunty, Babe O'Donovan and Red Crowell tossin' 'em from their hips and making them drop, you have something.

This Geneva-Westminster contest is the big game of the night. West Virginia Wesleyan meets Fairmont at Fairmont and Wash-Jeff continues its swing through the East by playing Lehigh at Bethlehem, or thereabouts.

Dr. Cliff Carlson will bundle his Pitt Panthers into a set of Pullmans this evening and head them toward South Bend, where tomorrow, they'll tackle the passers of Notre Dame in a return engagement.

IRISH SEEK REVENGE

When the Irish appeared here in the Stadium a few weeks ago, Doc's club handed them a right tasty pasting. The revenge motif will be strong in tomorrow night's tussle. Keogan, Irish coach, doesn't mind taking one on the chin from any given team a year but he hates like Sam Hill to take a couple. Turn about, according to Mr. Keogen, is fair play.

Meanwhile, the Dukes and Carnegie Tech are putting the finishing touches on their games in preparation for the tough assignments they have scheduled for the edification of local folks tomorrow, Tech meets Thiel in the Tartan gym and the Dukes entertain the crack Loyola University of Chicago up on the 3luff.

LOYOLA HAS REP

Either ball game is worth seeing, although the Loyolans come here with a peacherino of a reputation, established when the team won 35 consecutive games, and 35 out of their last 36. They beat the Dukes in Chicago earlier in the year.

Extra seats are being installed to take care of an anticipated overflow crowd. The Dukes will not get their main attraction under way until 9:15 p. m., but they will begin the festivities of what should prove a thrilling evening with two intra-mural games and the first home appearance of the new freshman quintet. The Duke yearlings will take on McKeesport High in an 8 o'clock preliminary. The first game will begin at 6 p. m.

What makes the Tech-Thiel battle worth while is the fact that it may be in this game that the Tartans will find themselves and ring one up on the right side of the ledger. So far, Tech has gone without a victory, though the boys have not failed, in a single contest, to make the going rugged for their opponents.

Nine members of the Carnegie freshman swimming team will leave for Canton, O., tomorrow morning to swim a dual meet with McKinley High School there tomorrow afternoon. The meet will be held in the Canton Y. M. C. A. pool at 3 o'clock. Coach Allen E. Risedorph and Manager David Tomer will be in charge of the squad. The Pitt Varsity swimmers meet W. & J., in the K. A. C. pool tomorrow night.

W. P. I. A. L. SECOND HALF PLAY OPENS

Leaders in the city high school basketball race are expected to retain their positions today inasmuch as they are not slated to meet tough opposition. The favorites in both sections of the city senior league meet weak opponents.

Schenley, Fifth Avenue and South, the strongest contenders in the Section I race, should have no trouble winning their contests. Allerdice is the attraction at Schenley, Peabody appears at South, while Fifth Avenue battles Ralston on the Ralston floor.

In Section II, Perry, favorite to win the crown, engages Carrick at Carrick, Langley appears at South Hills and Allegheny at Allegheny Vocational.

Next week, however, the leaders in both sections are slated to lock horns. These games are expected to have a decided bearing on the outcome of the second-round championships.

The second half of the scholastic basketball races in the W. P. I. A. L. gets under way this afternoon with all sections slated for action. Many sections in this loop are experiencing successful seasons with many races still in doubt.

JEANNETTE WINS

Two W. P. I. A. L. games were played yesterday. Jeannette set down Connellsville, 40 to 26, in Section 10, and Duquesne topped Munhall, 26 to 22, in Section 7.

St. Vincent's held a small lead throughout, and it was only in the closing minutes the Bearcats ran their total up to a safe margin. The Crowemen fooled their opponents by refusing to stall and made two baskets with less than 30 seconds to go. The lineup:

NOT GOING TO PORTO RICO

WASHINGTON, Pa., Feb. 7.—Jimmy Devlin, widely known and versatile golf pro at the Nemacolin Country Club near here, in Washington today, said that he would not go to Porto Rico this winter as he has done for more than a half dozen years. Devlin is under contract to the San Juan club, which has decided not to reopen, due to the ravages of the hurricane of last summer. As a result the Nemacolin pro occupies the unique distinction of receiving his contract salary for services which he has been requested not to render. Devlin and Mrs. Devlin are leaving for Philadelphia at once and later will go to Florida, where they will spend the remainder of the winter. Devlin will enter some of the late season southern golf events. He expects to be back at Nemacolin early in May.

Clarence Shakespeare, pro at the Washington County Golf and Country Club, is convalescing from an illness from which he has suffered since the close of the 1929 golf season.

The J. J. Veronas will be out to score their third straight Allegheny County League victory tonight when they invade the Allentown Turner Hall to oppose the Allentown Club in the only league contest on the schedule.

The Veronas, favorites to win the second half championship from the Duquesne Lafayettes, experienced litle trouble in defeating the Elizabeth Independents and Charlerol Lions in their first two games and if they show the same form tonight they should triumph with point, to spare.

Dad Rogers, sponsor of the Allentown Club has his team on edge for the important battle with the Veronas. While his team is rated the under-dog, Rogers feels certain his passers will check the drive of the Italians.

Elizabeth's passers set down the Fintex Club, 28 to 23, in their County League setto last night. In the West Penn circuit the Schneiders tripped the Penn Five, 29 to 19, and Kingsley House bested Y. M. H. A., 35 to 30. I. K. S. won from Manchester Community, 26 to 21, in the Central loop.

The Boys' Club beat St. Ann's, 51 to 22, in the Metropolitan; Byllesby set down Duquesne Light, 37 to 29, in the Philadelphia Company circuit, and McKees Rocks toppled Braddock, 48 to 25, in the Sokol League. The lineups:

NESSIE STILL OUT

LANSING, Mich., Feb. 7.—(AP.)—The suspension of Nessie Blumenthal, of Chicago, former manager of Arthur Shires, was continued in force indefinitely by the Michigan State Boxing Commission here yesterday.

Dribbles

Three games are scheduled in the Catholic Lyceum League tonight. St. John's plays at St. Casimir's, St. Joseph's opposes St. Henry's at St. Henry's, while Catholic Men's Club appears at St. Wendelin's.

The Irene Kaufmann Settlement Horse passers entertain the Foresters tonight in the only Central Pittsburgh League contest on the program.

Only one game is carded tonight in the Greater Pittsburgh Institutional League—Homewood-Brushton Y. playing at Hill Top Y.

Pressed Steel Car plays at Real Estate Trust tonight in the only Commercial-Industrial League battle.

SOCCER WARS HEARING HERE TOMORROW

By TOM BIRKS

An official hearing of arguments growing out of the Glendale-Gallatin game, together with the reopening of the Toms Run-Heidelberg Eagles affair, will be held here tomorrow evening. Secretary John McEwan, of the National Amateur Cup Committee, will be here from Cleveland to conduct an inquiry in both cases.

Seeing that there is new evidence on the Toms Run-Heidelberg Eagles affair, it is hardly possible that the replay will take place on Sunday. Referee Simpson, representatives of the Gallatin and Glendale clubs and players should be on hand.

The Glendale team protested the referee's right to call the Gallatin game with 15 minutes to go, the referee stating that he called the game at the request of the Glendale players.

Two games will be staged locally tomorrow afternoon, Crafton Heights will meet the Pierpoint Motors, and the Pittsburgh Celtics will tangle with the Clan Douglas team in a District League engagement.

The Celtics and Douglas game should be worth going a long way to see. Both teams are playing ideal soccer this season, and fans should be thrilled when the Douglas front line tangles with Hodgett's combination.

On Sunday, Thomas Run and the Heidelberg Eagles will meet to play off the protested game recently won by Thomas Run.

Max Schmeling Knocked Out—In Movies

BERLIN, Feb. 7.—(INS.)—Max Schmeling, the "Black Uhlan of the Rhine," contender for the world heavyweight championship, was knocked out today by Fritz Petersen, unknown German boxer, and went down for the full count—but it all happened in a movie studio.

Starring in a picture entitled "The Boxer and the Lady," Maxie posed before the camera in a sham fight, in which the scenario called for him to be defeated.

This game was one of the greatest staged this season, and while the Eagles are reported to have a fullback on the injured list, there is reason to feel the coming battle will be close.

The Pierpoints will swing into action after many weeks of idleness in league warfare, owing to the game with the Holley Carburetors being postponed so many times. Now that the blue and white of Pierpoint is sitting on the side lines in the National cup competitions, it can safely sit back and try to cop the District League trophy.

The Pierpoint defense found itself faced against Vizzer, who as manager of the Holleys, is probably the best center forward in the Middle West. Vizzer should have been followed very close. The Pierpoint center half has not been in soccer long enough to play that brother act to Vizzer. He managed to score four of the goals obtained by the Holleys.

In the American League, Gallatin will play the Corinthians at Horning, and the German Sport Club will make the trip to Harwick. Gallatin, with victory nearly in its grasp in the American, can hardly afford to drop the points to the Corinthians.

PRESIDENTS BEATEN BY LAFAYETTE

EASTON, Pa., Feb. 7.—W. & J. lost the second consecutive game of its Eastern trip last night when it was defeated by Lafayette, 27-12. Close guarding featured the contest. Lafayette started to pile up a large lead at the very start, scoring 11 points before Hamilton broke the ice for the Presidents with a field goal after 10 minutes. This was the lone goal made by the visitors during the first half. At half-time Lafayette led by a 16-4. The lineup:

Lafayette—27.		W. & J.—12.
Adams	F	Lewis
Keaser	F	Jay
Dimmerling	C	Hamilton
Gilchrist	G	McNeil
Lipetz	G	Umberger

Substitutions—Sullivan, Aherwalt, Gilleville, Lewis, Cook, Smith, Harris, Morton. Field goals—Adams, Keaser, Dimmerling 2, Gilchrist 2, Lipetz, Lewis, Jay, Hamilton, McNeil. Fouls—Lafayette, 13 out of 20; Wash-Jeff, 4 out of 13. Referee—Bitzenheimer. Umpire—Craper.

W. & J. YEARLINGS COP

SALTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 7.—W. & J.'s freshmen had to carry their fight into the last few seconds of play here last night to down the Kiski basketball team, 24 to 22. The game was fought neck-and-neck all evening, with each team in the lead and out of it, and with neither one of them more than two baskets ahead of the other. At the half the score was tied. The lineup:

W. & J. Frosh.—24.		Kiski—22.
Furlanic	F	Hendrickson
Johnson	F	Pollock
Barsell	C	Hathaway
Zagrai	G	Reiter
Schaeffer	G	Barclay

Substitutions—For Kiski: Gosnell; W. & J.: Barsell. Field goals—Kiski: Hendrickson 6, Pollock; W. & J.: Johnson 4, Barsell, Zagrai, Schaefer 3 each, Furlanic. Fouls—Kiski, 8 out of 11; W. & J., 7 out of 5. Referee—Malnias.

Long's Sport Comment

were red with gore. It was late in the fight when suddenly bells began to ring, whistles to blow and the spectators to yell as they always do in Paris at midnight on New Year's Eve.

"They don't do much in Paris on Christmas, spending the day quietly, but they make up for it on New Year's Eve. So, according to custom, when all the noise began, those two bruisers stopped their slugging right on the spot, held out their gloves to each other, shook hands and wished each other a Happy New Year. Then they resumed battering each other all around the ring. It was the funniest thing I ever saw in the fight game."

Don Bradman

CRICKET has a Babe Ruth in the person of Don Bradman, a 21-year-old sensation whose feats have brought fame to himself and to the little country town of Bowral, in New South Wales, where he makes his home. The young Australian first attracted attention throughout the cricket world three years ago, and has shown a consistency that establishes him among the brightest stars of the sport. Already in the present season he has broken last year's record of more than 1,000 runs, and he is the only batsman in New South Wales to score more than 300 runs in one inning on two occasions. Three seasons ago, Bradman hung up a world record in first-class cricket by scoring the remarkable total of 458, not out. His score was made in 415 minutes.

THOUGH he has appeared three times in American rings, the boxing fans of the country have no more knowledge than at the start as to whether or not Primo Carnera possesses any real fighting ability. As had been expected, Cowboy Bill Owens, whom the Italian giant stopped in the second round at Newark, N. J., last night proved just another push-over.

The Venetian's "victory" shed no more light on his possibilities as a fighter than did his "successes" against Big Boy Peterson and Elsear Rioux. It demonstrated, however, that a certain element is still willing to fall for the circus stuff, the affair drawing a capacity house of 8,000. In his three American bouts Carnera has been in action only a little more than five minutes, yet he has pulled down something like $40,000.

THE set-up stuff may be expected to continue until some state boxing commission scrapes up nerve enough to insist that the colossus meet a real fighter. The man selected for him in St. Louis looks to be even easier picking than Tiny Roebuck, whom he was originally scheduled to meet there.

Pennsylvania is fortunate in having a commission that will not stand for such imposition upon boxing patrons. As Chairman Frank Wiener said at the sports dinner last night, the Pennsylvania board realizes that its duty is to promote the boxing game, not a side-show.

CHICKIE :-: By ELENORE MEHERIN

and months ago. Chickie's breath grew faint. Was he remembering? Was he all trembly now?

The moon came up like a cold silver ball, and floated quietly into the embrace of purple mists. It rested there, sending down vague ladders of light to the housetops.

"Oh, Arthur, remember?" Chickie murmured. "Look out there—that's beautiful —"

"Yes." Then after a pause: "You like things like that don't you, Chickie?"

She liked them so much just then that she felt her heart a cup of warm tears melting and running over. She answered: "Don't you, Arthur?"

"Sure! But most girls don't. You're different. You're not a bit like others."

She no longer felt the earth under her feet; she no longer saw hills nor the sky; she was one with them; one with the sweet infinite harmony.

Just that little incident kept her imagination warm for weeks.

She was the eternal woman aching with love, waiting for this obtuse, resistant young male to awaken to receive the gift that trembled in her hands.

They were nearly finished business college when Mary said: "Oh, I suppose you won't take a position. You and Arthur'll get married?"

Chickie flushed. How she had hungered for some such sign from him. How she waited for him to protest—"Say, what's the use of your starting work anyhow? Haven't I got a good job? We might just as well—"

her. She was still lost in a misty happiness as they sat at a corner table in a cafe giving a view of the bay with a liner moving out to sea.

She looked into Arthur's eyes. She thought him so handsome, it melted her just to look at him.

"I'd like to be on that ship," Chickie said with the eternal talk of 17 to 20. "I'd like to be going off somewhere far away."

"Some day, I'm going."

"When?"

"Oh, in a year or two. They say there's great chances down in South America. After you get a good job, Chickie, why don't you save up and travel, too?"

Chickie's breath swelled. She said softly: "Jonathan doesn't want me to work."

"Why?"

"Oh, I don't know. You see, I'm the only one, and then he thinks there's so many other things you can do."

"Oh, I don't know. Most girls work today. You'd never be satisfied staying home, Chickie."

She felt as though he had put out his hand and coolly shoved her out of his life. She answered bravely: "But I love a home. I've always thought a little shingled bungalow with roses in the garden would be so sweet."

She was unaware that the eyes he found so pretty were now all glowing with hurt; that they searched him and told him more nakedly than words her secret hopes.

He said largely: "Oh, sure, that's all right. But, gee whiz! you're not ready to settle down yet, are you? Say, I wouldn't think of it, if I were you, for about five or ten years."

It was like a refusal—as though she had offered herself and he had turned her down.

The next morning those words were the first things she remembered. They returned to her with a pang; they whispered in her ear until she grew hot with shame.

But they went to the movies the same as usual. At the door, he stooped and kissed her. It softened everything.

Then a terrible thing happened. A week went by, and two, and he didn't phone or come, or send a single word.

She went to Mary's one Saturday afternoon. She went past the stunted palm, up the neglected lawn that ran along the side of the Blake house, to the kitchen door.

Little Tommy Blake came down the steps, Mary after him, crying indignantly: "Oh, you wait, you little villain! You just wait, Tommy Blake! I'm going right up to mother."

Tommy crouched behind a post in the yard, stuck his thumb to his nose and wagged all ten fingers, yelling: "Gee! Ain't you grand, though! Mother! Say, who do you mean, mommer?"

Mary waved her hand, saying with a gulp: "How would you like that, Chickie? And I spent a whole hour decorating that cake!" She pointed to the table.

There was a cake with little finger marks in the soft chocolate glaze, with big gouges where the nuts had been hurriedly scooped out.

Chickie's heart was too sore for a trifle like that.

"What do you care?" she said carelessly. "You won't have to bake for them all your life."

"Oh, I won't! Well, how do you know? Just because you're going to marry Arthur Sontag you think I won't have to stick right on here!"

"Don't be an idiot, Mary. I would not think of marriage, even with Arthur!"

Mary looked at her mystified, whispering excitedly. "What's happened? Heavens!"

Chickie suddenly wished to leave—to be alone. Mary was too sharp. Mary might get the whole thing out of her. But Mary set out the cups as was their Saturday custom. They sat down.

"I won't dream of getting married," Chickie said with a great air, "until Arthur's had a chance to save. As long as I've gone to business college I might as well work."

"Sure," Mary agreed. "You won't catch me tying myself down at 18. I'm thankful for one thing. I know what marriage means!"

They moved their chairs a little closer together. They hunched their elbows.

The screen door banged.

"Ho, ho!" Tommy, chewing a great wad of gum, his eyes half lost in their setting of freckles, sidled over to the table. He made a funny grimace, twisting his shoulder at Chickie.

She paid no attention. He flipped his hat into the air, caught it on one finger. "He-he-he! Just saw something! Just saw yer feller on the street, Chickie! He! Saw him walkin' along with Dolly Bacon!"

She grew all cold inside—and then all wild with heat.

Mary jumped up and grabbed Tommy by the coat. "O-oh! You little vixen! You better run!"

But she didn't say a word to Chickie.

Arthur never phoned again.

One day Chickie met him. "Oh, hello there, Chickie!" He said just that and didn't stop.

That was the day her heart broke.

Arthur Says He Would Not Think of Settling Down

The thing happened one Sunday. They were walking to the beach. Spring, the earth quivering as though from out its deep, quiet heart there came now rejoicing, awakening with song to new joys—all the million young sleeping here so still through all the centuries—awakening now and tripping with buoyant step upon the grass.

All the tulips seemed waking in their beds of crimson and gold, stretching delicate fingers and yawning prettily until they were all abloom.

Chickie caught his arm, laughing.

Her hair blew across his cheek. He brushed it gently aside; put his grinning face next to hers. "Say, Chickie, you're all blown to pieces. Say, Chickie, your eyes are shining like anything. Gosh! But you have swell eyes!"

All through her went a quivering experience; she felt her face pale, then suddenly race with color. He was staring at her. She said, abashed: "Oh, you say such silly things, Arthur!"

He repeated: "Well, you've got the prettiest eyes I ever saw."

Chickie felt her heart grow light, rise and float away with

RADIO WINNERS HONORED

Winners of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Radio Poll received certificates of award last night in two great demonstrations.

The first, on the Stanley Theater stage, was presided over by John S. Herron, president of City Council. The audience applauded as each winner was called to the center of the stage and awarded a certificate of honor. Theatergoers welcomed the opportunity of seeing the radio celebrities in person. Herron spoke highly of the Sun-Telegraph's purpose in conducting the Radio Poll to determine the most popular announcers, artists and stations as a guide in the makeup of its radio pages.

Don Bestor, winner of the poll, was host to other winners at the William Penn Hotel. A clever continuity written by Marquis Chisholm of KDKA was smoothly presented. Lloyd C. Thomas, commercial manager of all Westinghouse stations, received a certificate designating KDKA as the most popular station. Between orchestra numbers winners of the Radio Poll were introduced to the KDKA audience.

Those who received certificates were Don Bestor, Dick Powell, Virginia Harmon, Will Rhodes, Jim Hughes, Louis L. Kaufman, Walter G. Myers, Glenn Riggs and "Big Bill" Farren.

Speakers made many laudatory remarks about the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Radio Poll in which they stated that it was a true consensus of the majority of listeners in the Pittsburgh area.

Gossip From Movieland, Drama Review and Theatrical Notes

POETRY AND PATHOS MINGLE IN TRAGEDY OF "LEAR" PLAYED BY LEIBER

By GEORGE SEIBEL

SHAKESPEARE'S tragedy of "King Lear" has but one superior in the depth, none in the grandeur of its poetry. Aside from "Hamlet" it is generally admitted to be Shakespeare's greatest play. It is not often seen on the stage but Robert Mantell revived it and made it one of his famous parts. Now Fritz Leiber has also put it into his repertoire, and last night this new Lear came upon the stage of the Alvin Theater to vent his rages and voice his prayer in the teeth of the storm.

George Seibel

It is Leiber's supreme triumph.

This tragedy is so terrible that some of its scenes could not be played on the modern stage. Imagine Cornwall plucking out Gloster's eyes, one of the incidental horrors as Shakespeare wrote it.

When Kyd and Marlowe produced their tragedies of blood, such things on the stage were not uncommon. The Elizabethans were not as tender-hearted as we are. Today it is shock enough to see old Gloster come sightless upon the scene.

But no amount of softening can make "King Lear" light entertainment for the Tired Business Man. He would find it a nightmare. It lacks the Ziegfeld touch. A mad old king trying to howl down the storm upon the heath—no, turn on the St. Louis Blues!

Fritz Leiber makes this tragedy a thing of poetry and pathos that is not likely to be soon forgotten by those that saw it. The most powerful and poignant performance of the week, it is also the finest Shakespearean performance seen in Pittsburgh since the Hamlet of Edwin Booth and the Shylock of Henry Irving.

Great is the only word that fits!

Study In Senility

Leiber has made this impersonation a study in senility: an old man's whims, an old man's rages, an old man's intuitive flashes of wisdom even in his mental eclipse.

He has done more—he has made it a grand fugue of the richest poetry, which his organ voice interprets with the full diapason of all the passions.

The wild glare of his eyes in the mad scenes, the savage malice of the curse, the tender pathos at Cordelia's death, the imperious climax of "Every inch a king!"—all these were bits of a full-length portrait such as has seldom been painted of so tempestuous a character.

His very make-up was a masterpiece of infinite detail and exquisite perfection.

Those who missed this Lear missed something memorable and monumental. It is Fritz Leiber's best role. I am tempted to say but shall compare it with his Hamlet tonight.

Notably Fine Cast

Like the star, the company was also at its best. Robert Allen gave a very fine portrayal of Edgar, especially stirring in the scenes of Poor Tom upon the heath. Marie Carrell as Cordelia again showed that spontaneity of action and that tender simplicity which this role calls for.

Thayer Roberts as Cornwall, Philip Quin as Gloster, Lawrence H. Cecil as Kent, John Forrest as the Fool, Hart Jenks as Edmund, all gave human characterizations and intelligent readings. The wicked sisters, Goneril and Regan, were portrayed adequately by Vera Allen and Virginia Bronson.

Again it was a production that lent perfect atmosphere to the grim tragedy—rich settings but not over-elaborate, and costumes that match the gorgeous brocades of Shakespearean verse.

February sixth will be a memorable day in Pittsburgh's theatrical annals. For it will not be easy to forget the "King Lear" of Fritz Leiber, from its first gesture of ill-temper to its last death rattle. I can recall no better Shakespearean performance in the past 25 years.

Flywheel Bursts, Woman in Home Decapitated

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Death, assuming the form of a flywheel flew through space for two blocks, plunged through the roof of a house, slashed a woman's head from her shoulders and buried itself deep in the ground under the floor.

James Brice, a Negro, was sawing wood in a vacant lot. The balance wheel, an iron disc half an inch thick, snapped as the saw was running at high speed. One part fell to the ground and the other sailed high in the air, clearing a two-story church and two small houses and plunging through the roof of a third.

Winnie Jones, Negro woman, was struck by the iron.

Walter Winchell On Broadway

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.

Things I Never Knew Till Now

THAT a popular-priced cigaret will shortly be introduced that will require no matches to light it.

That the cauliflower ear is not due to a punch, but to an infection.

That Don Marquis' new play, "Everything's Jake," contains an actor named Walter Vonnegut, who was Mrs. Marquis' first husband.

That when a person wishes to sell his Rolls-Royce he must first notify the Rolls-Royce people who, it is alleged, demand a right to have the first chance at buying back their engine.

That the lights on the marquee of the Palace Theater read: "Phil Baker, Lita Gray Chaplin, Siamese Twins"!

That a lobster walks forward and swims backward.

HOT ONES BARRED?

THAT certain posters and other theatrical displays that are executed in oil paints cannot be exhibited in theaters nor in their foyers unless the house has special permission from the Fire Department.

That next door to the Charles Hopkins Theater on Forty-ninth street, where "Michael and Mary" is a show hit, there is a drug store which features a "Michael and Mary" sandwich, mainly made of ham and cheese.

That Jefferson, the president, also invented the folding ladder.

That Gil Swan has only just discovered the way to get by on Broadway: "Kiss your way to independence and then kick, regardless!"

That Roy L. McCardell who quit colyuming for New York rags because he was weary of striving to be clever all the time, will soon have his "My Aunt Angie" published, which mentions you, you and probably you!

HAS SOME HARD WORDS

THAT it took 75 years to compile the Oxford Dictionary.

That the reason you seldom see a leading lady and her love-interest kiss full on the mouth any more is that most of the leading ladies dislike having their lip rouge smeared—on stage, that is.

That there is gold-plated plumbing in Alice Brady's house.

That Florence Reed, who appeared as Mother Goddam in the naughty "Shanghai Gesture" show, spurned the role of leading lady in "Scarlet Pages" on the ground that it wasn't "a nice play."

That Dorothy Stone (Fred's little girl) considered the opening of "Ripples" in Newark important enough to get a permanent wave.

That Rudy Wiedoeft isn't deaf at all, and that he hopes the practical joker who started the rumor had to pay for the clippings he received from all parts of the country over the report.

RAIN-MAKING HINT

THAT every time Katharine Cornell (two a's Mr. Printer) opens in a New York show it rains on the premiere eve'g.

That U. S. Attorneys and Judges need never study the law nor pass any exams to hold their offices.

That the Chinese pickle their eggs and eat them from 10 to 100 years old, according to an almanac.

That the reason Austria gave in during the Huge Tiff was that it ate itself out of rations due to racketeers who counterfeited millions of "Ration Coupons" and peddled them for a premium.

That a man dies if exposed to too much carbon dioxide (not the exhaust from a car, you dope!), but plants and flowers cannot live without it.

That there are parts of these good old United States that have never been penetrated by white men, nor mapped.

NOTICE, FAT LADIES

THAT you weigh less in salt water than you do in the tub kind.

That the only thing that stops the discovery of perpetual motion, the pinnacle of every inventor's ambition, is friction, which cannot be eliminated.

That raw meat is one of the easiest things to digest, and if we ate nothing but that we wouldn't have to brush our molars, which would never decay except with extreme old age. (That's worth money!)

That the first eight rows of the orchestra are cheaper than those further back in France.

That human sacrifice is still practiced in Hayti, the Republic.

That the only grease that penetrates the skin is lanoline, which most cold creams are without.

That Mussolini's personal bodyguard when he appears in public, numbers 2,000 men.

THE COLLEGE CUT-UP

THAT an elephant has been dissected in Princeton, and all by one man.

That ordinary shaving soap makes swell tooth paste—providing you do not mind the taste.

And that a bottle found under your table in a night club, restaurant or speakeasy gives them no evidence that you have been drinking, but a flask does.

Class at Etna To Present Play

The Helping Hand Sunday School class of the First United Presbyterian Church, Etna, will present "Mammy's Lil' Wild Rose" in the church auditorium, February 11.

THREE STAGES BUSY NEXT WEEK

"Journey's End," war play coming to the Alvin for a limited engagement, commencing next Monday night, is the work of a young Englishman, R. C. Sheriff. It has been given production in the United States and Canada by Gilbert Miller, who at this time is operating two theaters in New York and one in London, and is the most active international producer of the legitimate drama. Seats are now on sale.

"The Vagabond King," a musical romance with a score by Rudolf Friml, will come to the Nixon for a week's engagement, commencing Monday night. Seats are now on sale at the box office.

The play announced for the Pitt next week is "The Ghost Train," which was one of the first to be produced when George Sharp first brought his company to this city three years ago. The production is a mystery melodrama.

Men's Brotherhood To Hold Banquet

The ninth annual banquet of the Men's Brotherhood of St. Luke's Evangelical Lutheran church, West View, will be held Friday night in the church rooms. The speakers will be Judge James H. Gray and State Senator Herman Brandt. The former's subject will be "Outlawing War."

Tech Student Wins Mining Scholarship

The national scholarship of $500 offered annually by the Women's Auxiliary to the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers has been awarded to Richard M. Barnhart, of Monongahela, a sophomore in the department of mining and metallurgy at Carnegie Institute of Technology. The scholarship is effective during the 1930-31 session. Barnhart is the second student from Western Pennsylvania to win the honor, the first being Fenton H. Finn, a Carnegie student who won the award in 1927.

PROHIBITION OFFICERS INVADE ACTOR BELMORE'S HOME AND TO JAIL HE GOES

By DOROTHY HERZOG

(Copyright, 1930, By Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 7.

EVERY time I sit on a wrangle involving the pros and cons of this and that emoter, I'm reminded of Abraham Lincoln's shrewd comment:

"Never a good dog without fleas."

Or did I step out of line again . . . .

Hedda Hopper's six-foot son, Bill, (Bill is only 14), walked into the dining-room and sat down. Hedda looked at his hands. The left was clean. The right, dirty.

Hedda Hopper

"Bill, do you know your right hand is filthy?"

"Yes."

"When was the last time you washed it?"

"Three days ago."

"And why do you come to the dinner table with one hand clean and the other dirty?"

"Shook hands with Lindy three days ago," Bill blurted out.

But much to his annoyance, Hedda rated hygiene over hero worship.

Lionel Belmore's case comes before the local courts soon. Mr. Belmore, as respectable a citizen as ever inhaled ozone, was the unwilling host to prohibition officers who invaded his home with a warrant. Mr. Belmore was arrested, taken to jail, and subjected to the routine given hardened criminals. His case is a matter of intense interest to Hollywood-ites who know and appreciate the sterling worth of this fine actor.

Cannibals Now In Hollywood

WHEN M. G. M.'s "Trader Horn" troupe returned from six months celluloid jungling in Africa, they brought back with them several honester-goodness cannibals. The cannibals are here for exhibition purposes. After the picture is released they trek back to the native heath. They don't speak English. Their only amusement is to see flicks run off in the M. G. M. projection room.

An inventive soul connected with Howard Hughes' Caddo company has invented a new camera lense. This new lense will closeup, finely sharpened, objects as far away as two miles. It should go a long way to revolutionizing present camera methods. At least, it should be an economic time saver. Hughes, I believe, will make use of the new lense in scenes for "Hell's Angels."

Appropos of "Hell's Angels" and closeups, Hughes spent $20,000 for two closeups. Which, as closeups go, is a high priced mark.

SCREENALITIES: The Richard Wallaces depart Pronto for a two months jaunt that will see them do the big world circumnavigation act. Richard has just finished the new Moran & Mack comedy, "Two Black Crows In the A. E. F." He and his wife sail from Los Angeles, hit the Orient, sight-see on to Paris and London and return via New York. Listens elegant. . . Wesley Barry's cinematic hat is in the ring again. The freckle faced one will traipse with Benny Rubin, Marceline Day et al in "Sunny Skies." . . Virginie Valli and Anderson Lawler lunching tete-a-tete at ye Brown Derby . . . Carey Wilson, Barney Glazer, and John McCormack at the Embassy round-table. . . Alexander Gray's police dog Ranger is in a canine school. Purpose: To learn good manners. There's more than a thought in that. . . Lila Lee treated herself to the flu but doesn't think so much of the treat. . . Blanche Sweet is shaking the dust of the town from her shoes today or tomorrow. Blanche gets into her car and just goes. She'll land some place and remain a week. Swell idea. . . The sun has gone back to its perpetual shine racket. Lawd, I'd hate to be a legitimate vegetable in this country. Without a sense of humor, a vegetable doesn't stand a chance, what with winter going summer and summer going on and on . . And—that's all.

Viola Hanna is prominent in the cast of "The Vagabond King," musical play which opens a return engagement Monday in the Nixon.

NAILS FINGER TO CORN CRIB

TIPTON, Ind.—(INS.)—Elmer Letsinger, a farmer living Northeast of here, nailed his hand to a corncrib he was repairing in one of the strangest accidents on record.

Letsinger was fastening some galvanized iron about the bottom of a corn crib on his farm. He was driving a nail through the iron. Just as he started a tremendous whack at the nail the middle finger of his left hand slipped under the nail.

The hammer came dawn and shot the nail right through the finger and intn the wood, nailing the finger tightly to the corn crib.

Letsinger was unable to release himself and shouted for help. It was necessary to draw the nail to release Letsinger. He was then rushed to the city where a physician found the bone in the finger had been splintered.

City Will Spend $30,000,000 in 1930

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—(INS.)—Indianapolis public officials and business firms plan more than $30,000,000 worth of improvements in 1930, according to reports at a meeting held in response to President Hoover's business conference movement to stimulate prosperity.

The total amount was said to be $12,000,000 greater than at the same time in 1929.

State, county and city officials reported that $7,000,00 worth of public work would begin as soon as warmer weather comes and executives of a number of large companies outlined their expansion plans.

Jazz Band Robbers New Idea in Paris

PARIS.—(INS.)—Enter the jazz band robbers!

Up to and including the stroke of midnight, M. Perrier, Auteman and Guerraz entertained customers at a local restaurant with their syncopated tunes.

Afterwards they continued to play tunes only on other people's cash registers and family safes. The burglar trio worked in the greatest harmony until they choose to burglarize a policeman's home.

Since they had no particular need for a policeman at that time.

Stock Exchange Topics

Jump in Canadian Pacific Ascribed to Splitup Confirmation.

CANADIAN PACIFIC has fooled Wall street speculators so long that when the stock suddenly shot forward some 14 points to 216 around midday it was thought to be one of the periodical moves based on rumors of a melon for stockholders. This rumor has been circulated for years and always has been denied in official circles. Wall street has long cherished the belief that some day Canadian Pacific directors would segregate the company's valuable properties and pass a present along to stockholders. The move in the stock today turned out to be based on a real development, news of which had leaked out in the street. Early in the afternoon the news came from Montreal that E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway had confirmed reports that the company will split its stock in the ratio of four to one, subject to the necessary legislation under the railway act.

Delaware, Lackawanna and Western stood out among the high-grade rails this morning staging a brisk advance into new high ground on the movement. Buying is based on the road's strong strategic position in the Eastern railway field owing to the large traffic it originates between New York and Buffalo. First National Bank interests are the largest holders and the floating supply of the stock is small. Lackawanna has been alloted to the Van Sweringens under the Interstate Commerce Commission's consolidation program. If the plan goes through according to schedule it is probable the Van Sweringens will use Lackawanna as their fast passenger line from New York to the West in place of the Erie system.

THE copper situation has changed for the better, in the opinion of L. Vogelstein, chairman of the board of American Metals Company. By mid-summer, he thinks, stocks of refined copper as the result of curtailment in production and improving consumption of the metal will be back to normal. Mr. Vogelstein sees no likelihood of any reduction in the price of copper from the present level of 18 cents delivered and points out that despite several months of small sales, there is little "bootleg" of under-priced copper being offered.

United States Industrial Alcohole has become something of a mystery stock during the past few days and its action has given little indication of which way the stock was going to jump. It is reported in Wall street that a sizeable short interest is trapped in Industrial Alcohol and that they are a little uncomfortable. Professional traders are supposed to have been selling the stock recently because of fears of alcohol competition from Union Carbinde. A few days ago it was rumored that a new raid on the market was being organized and that Industrial Alcohol was going to be used as the first target. The day after the rumor was spread around Alcohol jumped several points. The next day sales were much heavier and the stocks declined again.

AUSTRALIAN issues on the London Stock Exchange recovered today when it was stated by the premier and treasurer of the Australian government that there would be no failure to meet interest on obligations of that country as promptly in the future as in the past. The statement said that there is no intention nor is any need expected for recourse to external loans to meet large amounts of loans maturing to the commonwealth in 1930.

Within a short time it is expected that Otis Elevator "new" will be listed on the New York Stock Exchange. The new shares are a result of a recent four-for-one split-up, the former are now selling on a when issued basis around 80 compared with a high last year for the present stock of 450. Popularising of Otis Elevator through a lower price for its shares should result in a wider distribution. Tendency of the times is toward the construction of higher buildings and this means growth for Otis. In addition to this its revenue from maintenance and repair work is also substantial.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—The prompt response made by the money markets to the New York Federal Reserve Bank's lower rediscount rate was accompanied by increased activity in the bond list during today's early trading. Although prices were rather mixed, there was good support for United States governments and first grade rails, the two pivotal groups.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty seconds of dollars):

STOCKS BOUND UP LED BY RAILROADS

Brisk Rally Comes Into Market After Early Period of Dullness

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—(AP.)—After an early period of irregularity and dullness, the stock market bounded upward again today under the leadership of the railroad shares, at least a dozen of which moved into new high ground for the year. Most of the early declines of 1 to 5 points had been cut in half, or wiped out, by early afternoon, when a long list of issues were selling 1 to nearly 15 points above yesterday's final quotations.

In view of the cut in the New York Federal Reserve rediscount rate yesterday, the early action of the market was disappointing to many traders, and one of the large commission houses sent out a message over its extensive wire system urging customers to take profits. The market turned dull on the decline after bear traders had made several futile attempts to unsettle the general list, with the result that it was quick to rally when strong buying support appeared.

NEWS FAVORABLE

While a series of favorable 1929 earnings reports and the inauguration of dividends on the new General Electric stock at the annual rate of $1.60, which is equivalent to $6.40 on the old stock, which paid $4 with extras, had a cheerful effect on sentiment, chief stress was laid on the general lowering of credit conditions throughout the world and its expected stimulus to world trade.

A further break of $1 a bale in cotton prices, bringing them to a new low level for the season, accompanied the announcement that the wholesale index of commodity prices already was at the lowest level in five years.

Call money renewed at 4 per cent, as against 4½ yesterday, while time money displayed an easier undertone, particularly for the longer maturities.

Canadian Pacific was the leader of the railroad group, soaring 14¼ points to 216¼ in anticipation of an early announcement of a 4-to-1 stock split-up. Lackawanna, Erie, New Haven, New York Central and Norfolk and Western moved up 2 to 4 points, all at new 1930 peaks, in expectation of important developments concerning the eastern railroad consolidation program.

WIDE GAINS MADE

Detroit Edison soared 11 points. Stone and Webster 8 and National Lead, Commonwealth Power, Peoples Gas, Porto Rican Tobacco, American Woolen preferred and Gillette Safety Razor rallied 4 to 6 points, the sharp rebound in the last named following official denials of rumors that the production program for the new razor had been delayed.

In the early selling, Simmons broke 4⅛ points to a new 1930 low at 72, which contrasts with the 1929 high of 188, but rallied to around 75. Industrial Rayon dropped 12½ points and Vulcan Detinning 11 on small turnovers.

Belgian Tubize Omits Dividend

BRUSSELS, Feb. 7.—The Tubize Art Silk Company's net profit of 9,490,966 francs will be written off and no dividend declared. The earnings of the French Tubize company, 4,869,179 francs, will also be written off.

United Verde Copper Production Declines

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Production of copper by United Verde Extension Mining Company in January totaled 4,446,000 pounds against 4,742,000 in December, and 4,776,000 in January, 1929.

CHAIN STORE SALES

The first 93 chain store systems to report January business showers aggregate sales of $101,416,908, compared with $91,243,085 in January, 1929, an increase of 6.49 per cent. These figures, however, do not portray a true comparison as most of the companies included in the compilation opened new stores or acquired other companies during the year and the sales figures were not adjusted to reflect these changes.

Farm Board Urges Cotton Output Curb

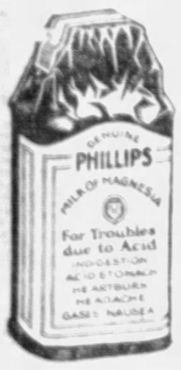
JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 7.—Determination to hold the 1930 cotton acreage below 40,000,000 acres was expressed here today by the cotton acreage reduction committee of the American Cotton Cooperative Association.

To this end an educational campaign will be launched throughout the South to cut the 1930 acreage by 6,000,000 acres below that of 1929. Action by the committee followed upon an address by Carl Williams, cotton representative of the Federal Farm Board, who told the cotton men an excess of this acreage would mean "courting the danger line."

Well Completions Fewer in January

OIL CITY, Pa., Feb. 7.—The Derrick says that new oil wells completed in the Bradford district of the Roxalea were 168 fewer in January than in December of last year. New production was 76,855 barrels more than double the December total, due to 580,361 barrels of new output in Oklahoma where 381 wells were completed. During January, 1,712 wells were completed, of which 442 were dry and 228 gasers.

During January 4,197 rigs were under construction or drilling as compared with 4,837 at the end of December.



When Food Sours

Sweeten the stomach—instantly

About two hours after eating, some of the food decomposes. Nearly many people suffer from a sour, acid stomach. It is the symptoms. They call it indigestion, but they never understand what it means that the stomach does not have enough hydrochloric acid. You know been overdone. There is an easy cure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 75 years. It instantly neutralizes many times its volume of acid. Take a little—

The right dose will prove Milk of Magnesia—not only the best, but the most pleasant acid corrective. Mint flavored. Milk of Magnesia has been the standard with physicians for 50 years, and is the preference of Chefs in 9 out of 10 first class hotels and restaurants. Buy only genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Prescribed and endorsed for more than 50 years. Always insist on the genuine Phillips. Don't be persuaded to accept substitutes. 25c and 50c bottles—any druggist.

1415 W. 62nd St., Seattle, Wash.

MRS. H. DOLHONDE
6318 York St., New Orleans, Louisiana

"My little daughter was born on a homestead in northern Alberta. I had four other children and I worked so hard that I suffered a nervous breakdown. The doctor's tonic did not seem to help me and when a friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began to take that instead. I kept on until I felt well again. It brought back my strength. Today I can do anything, thanks to the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. William Parent.

"Eight years ago before my last baby was born, I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got such good results that I named her Catherine Lydia. I have six older children and five grandchildren too. I am 44, but people tell me I look much younger. I am now taking the Vegetable Compound again because of my age. I eat and sleep better and I do all my housework, and my washing. I will do my best to answer letters."—Mrs. H. Dolhonde.

DAILY TRUE STORY

An Honest Actor

OTIS BURMAN had a stock company in a mad western city. That was where I first got to know him.

I was a reporter on one of the morning papers. Any number of times I told him that he ought to go to New York and get into some of the top-notch casts. He preferred his stock company.

I drifted back East and from the newspaper game to the theatrical game, but never as an actor. I was doing publicity for a big producing firm.

It must have been 15 years after that I saw Burman again. The years seemed to have told heavily on him.

"Oh, I had to give up my stock company," he said after I made myself known to him. "Pictures were too strong a rival, and when the talkies came along that finished us."

After this I often saw him.

Otis Burman was different. If you judged him by his fellows of the theatrical profession who loitered about in that vague realm known as the Rialto.

Any number of the old-timers who had been out of work for a year or more and whose clothes showed it would say: "Everything's jake with me. Belasco has just called me for rehearsal in his new production."

Or some has-been of never-was would explain rather too jauntily: "Hopkins offered me only 300. Of course I turned him down."

Actors who would have been glad to grab off a 40-a-week part would never admit that anything was wrong.

But Burman was different.

Meet him on the street and say, "How are you, Mr. Burman, anything stirring?" he would be quite likely to reply: "Absolutely nothing. If this keeps up I'll be washing dishes."

Naturally his fellow professionals looked at him askance and thought him decidedly queer.

Director Displeased

But Otis Burman was not queer. He was simply honest. He was as honest offstage as in the few small parts he would get. He always played his parts simply and naturally. He used to figure out just about how a man in real life put in the same position as the character in the play would feel and think and deport himself, and then he interpreted the part that way.

Burman was pretty well known in casting offices—outside of the gate—and very little known on theater programs.

That smart army of optimists around the Rialto knew him all right and liked him. Some even argued with him to "put on a front."

"Never admit you're down, Otis, old man," they would say. "It hurts you. Say you are resting between parts or waiting to decide on one of two or three offers."

"Tut, tut," Burman would answer, chuckling at the same time, "that's childish. Anyone with sense knows that if I am not working it is because I can't find a director who will give me a part."

Joe Case, casting for Dilway's coming production, "The Next in Line," was giving me some dope for publicity and chanced to say that he hadn't found a man for the part of Don Orrillo.

I had read the play. I instantly thought of Burman.

"Do you know Otis Burman?" I asked.

"Sure, but he isn't well known—"

"If you are looking for big names, he's out, Joe," I agreed, "but if you are looking for a man who can walk away with the part, Burman is it."

"I'll look for him. Perhaps he can do it," Joe said.

I knew very well that he could. That afternoon I ran into Burman on Forty-fourth street.

"Working, Mr. Burman?" I asked.

"Not for months," said the honest old man.

Small Part in Play

Now about every actor will tell you that such a confession is a terrible mistake. Somebody needing your type will, on the tip from such a confession, promptly offer only about half of what he had in mind to pay for the part.

"There may be a bit for you in Dilway's new production, 'The Next in Line.' Go up now and see Joe Case," I told him.

Burman thanked me gravely but he did hurry a little. Poor old duffer had seen so many parts "just filled" that he probably feared this would happen again. But it didn't. Case gave Burman the script to sit and read through because Burman demanded it. He wanted to know what it was all about before he studied his "side."

"I'd like to do that," Burman said.

The part of Don Orrillo was small. The character was on only twice. In the first act he appears ruddy with the vigor of healthy old age, the proud head of a noted family and a vast estate.

In the last act he is broken in health and spirit. He signs away his vast estate to save from execution his beloved grandson and to save the family from public dishonor. Then, left alone, he dies at the table. This ends the play.

Joe Case told me, when I asked him how Burman was doing at rehearsals, that the old man surprised him.

"His death scene is a wow," said Joe.

I dropped in to see the tag, and, believe me, Burman was good. I was anxious to see if the critics would recognize this or devote their stuff to the famous stars in the cast. To my delight they gave the old man as much space as they did the stars in the piece.

They doubled the original salary he had been so happy to accept.

He was greatly beloved in the cast and by Dilway himself.

I was backstage one night when Jessica Hanley, one of the stars in the cast, asked me to telephone Doctor Vance Wardell.

The doctor prescribed for Miss Hanley, and I always on the job and spotting possible publicity, asked him to stay for the finish.

"Stay in the wings, Doc," I said, "and watch Burman. We think he's rather wonderful."

The doctor did so. I was with him. I didn't watch old man Burman do his death scene. I knew how he would do it. I watched Dr. Wardell.

Perfect Death Scene

He stood there gripping a wing prop and stared as the curtain came down and then up and down twice more. Burman never "came to life" to take a curtain bow. He always remained in the position of death across the table. He said that it spoiled the effect if he showed himself alive after that scene.

Finally the curtain was down for the finish and Burman got up and trotted off. I thought I heard Dr. Wardell mutter something.

"Wonderful bit, isn't it, Doc?" I said.

"The most wonderful thing about it is that he finally does get up alive and well. I didn't belive he would ever stir again. It was so perfect," the doctor declared.

That was what I was after.

I quoted Doctor Wardell in some of our advertising. To my surprise he came over to see me.

"You mean well enough," he said, "but it is unethical on my part. It looks as if I was after some advertising. You'll have to stop quoting me or I'll be in trouble with Doctor Siddel, head of the medical staff at the hospital."

I told him I was sorry and would drop it. But it was too late then to change the advertisements in the evening papers. Doctor Wardell came over again about it. I explained what I had done.

"Doctor Siddel called me down for it," he explained.

"I'll go and see him about it—"

"No need—he understands my explanation. But he says that it is all poppycock, my believing that an actor or any man can simulate death from a heart attack cleverly enough to fool a doctor."

"Oh, is that so? Well, just bet him something and bring him over," I advised.

"Oh, we have made a wager."

"When can you come over and see the show?"

"Tomorrow night, but just for the last act."

I promised the seats. Then, curious, I asked if it was a very stiff bet.

"In a way—Doctor Siddel is wealthy and I am not, so he thought it would be more sporty if we wagered one week of our vacations."

Vacation as Bet

"That's a queer wager," I commented, fishing for more details and wishing I could make "copy" of this bet.

"If Doctor Siddel, who is strictly honest, says that Burman's death scene isn't at all right, I will give him a week of my vacation and take his place in the hospital and if he agrees that I am right I get the extra week's vacation."

"A week's vacation for a hard-working doctor is no slouch of a bet," I agreed, and I was then planning just how I could get some good publicity out of it. Dr. Wardell would win. I had no doubt of that.

I saw the two doctors come in at the beginning of the third act. I had not only left seats for them, but left a seat for myself right behind them. I wanted to be there and hear it all.

When it came to the big final scene where the character, Don Orrillo, signs away everything and makes the hero the "Next in Line," giving the play its title, I watched Dr. Siddel.

His face never gave a hint of his thoughts. He watched Burman go through his death scene intently but with a poker face.

The curtain lowered.

"There you are—perfection!" Doctor Wardell said.

To my surprise Doctor Siddel shook his head.

"I cannot agree. It is all terribly overdone," he declared.

The curtain had gone up and down again quickly.

"I've seen scores of men go with a heart attack before you were out of medical school, Wardell, and I tell you this is all wrong—"

The curtain went up swiftly. Dilway, himself, stood there.

"Just a moment!" he shouted.

Only a few had reached the outer doors. All turned and waited for the noted producer's announcement.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "I want you to pay tribute to the memory of Otis Burman. His was not acting in that final scene tonight—he did die!"

HELP FOR FARMERS AND THEIR FRIENDS!

Congressman Frisby Offers Pamphlet for One and All.

Felis Leo and Felis Domesticatticus.

WASHINGTON.—Farmers whose livestock and barnyard fowl are prey to wild beasts of the jungle will be protected hereafter by a pamphlet written by Congressman Frisby, who hopes to issue it through the Department of Agriculture.

"Yes, yes, yes," declared Congressman Frisby at his bi-annual conference with a newspaper man yesterday. "I expect to warn and educate the farmer. For example, the felis leo, or jungle lion, which I term the King of Beasts, will slay ox or milch kyne, often carrying its prey for miles. The farmer must be taught the difference between felis kittycaticus and felis-nondomesticaticus. Felis kittycaticus catches mice and drinks milch and is therefore the farmer's friend. But the felis Afro-civithittyferocio, or lion, has a tufted tail, and is therefore to be shunned. To tell the truth, place the foot in the felis leo's mouth. If he bites off the foot he is not an ordinary house cat, which is no larger than a ruffled lemur."

All Would Fight Dope If Need Were Realized

It is encouraging to note that Representative Stephen G. Porter is receiving support of thoughtful persons in his home district who approve his fight on the narcotic drug evil. Many in Pittsburgh have commented favorably on the purpose of two bills which Mr. Porter has introduced in Congress.

One of the measures provides for an adequate federal narcotic bureau with sufficient power to deal with government relationship to narcotic dope on a scale warranted by the constantly increasing seriousness of the situation.

Second of the Porter bills proposes licensing manufacturers, dealers, doctors and dentists who have legitimate use for narcotics. It would regulate the distribution to the limits of legitimate needs.

Women, especially, should be interested in the passage of these bills. Mrs. Philip Benz, who has been a crusader in women's clubs in behalf of the fight against the dope evil for a number of years, declares "its suppression is of vital importance."

"I strongly hope Mr. Porter's bills will be passed," Mrs. Benz comments. "I hope the women's clubs will give their support. The narcotic traffic is a vicious thing, the seriousness of which few people seem to realize."

That is it, exactly. If all parents realized how menacing dope is to the future of their children, everybody would get behind the Porter bills.

You May Wear One Some Day

The Latest in Gas Masks.

MINIATURE GAS MASKS, IN MODERN WEAR.

You have seen pictures of gas masks worn in the late war, worn now in cases of gas explosion, etc.

The old type mask was enormous, hideous, covering the whole face, making the wearer look like a demon.

Germans have developed a new, simple, easily adjusted gas mask shown in this picture. It looks as though each of the men were holding a dinner bell in his mouth, grasping the handle with the teeth. The simple apparatus is a complete, effective gas mask, such as was used in a recent deadly gas explosion in Hamburg.

With this simple gas mask protector the wearer can safely face poison gases.

But this does not apply to certain gases that attack the skin and eat holes in the body. But these simple masks would protect you in any ordinary "gas bombardment" by airplanes.

It might be as well to get one and know how to use it. There is no telling when the new kind of war will start. It would begin suddenly, in the air above great cities, and it will not be amusing.

Perhaps human decency and intelligence will ward it off for many years, perhaps, even, for ever.

But it is just as well to be prepared. The strong are not attacked.

'The Angels of Mons'

They Were Movies.

Perhaps the most amazing story that has come out of the war is that of Col. Friedrich Herzenwerth, formerly of the Imperial German Intelligence Service. He says the "angels of Mons"—those visionary figures that the British Army saw in Flanders—were neither a miracle nor an illusion. On the contrary, he declares, they were MOVING PICTURES, thrown on the clouds from German airplanes to spread panic in the retreating British forces.

Unfortunately, he explains, the British put the wrong interpretation on them. The Germans intended them for Teutonic avenging angels; the Tommies took them for friendly spirits from an English heaven. So the scheme "bounced back" on the German General Staff.

Col. Herzenwerth credits some English officer with turning the vision to the benefit of the British arms.

"It was a magnificent bit of counter-propaganda," he says. "Their method of interpreting our angels as protectors of their own troops turned the scale completely upon us. Had the British command contented itself by simply issuing an army order unmasking our trickery it would not have been half as effective."

Equal misfortune attended efforts to fool the French. A gigantic female shadow cast on the clouds was welcomed by the poilus as Joan of Arc, and when it was later changed to that of a man it was taken by the Allies as the figure of St. George.

Only on the Russian front, says the colonel, did the experiment work. And there it was not a complete success because the weather spoiled it.

The story, if true, furnishes interesting material to historian, psychologist, war veteran and philosopher alike.

It shows the extraordinary preparations made by the German military leaders, and their equally extraordinary failure to see that a novel weapon may prove a boomerang. As an example of inept propaganda it is perhaps the most striking in existence.

And were one mystically inclined, one might see the hand of the supernatural in it after all—if not in its methods, certainly in its effects. Who can tell whether it was not one of the decisive elements that turned the tide, saved the Allies, swept away the House of Hohenzollern and raised Germany from imperialism to democracy?

Such a conclusion is hardly more fanciful than the story itself.

Safety Device for Capitol Dome -:-

Very recent conflagrations
In the White House office building,
In the graceful dome that rises
High above the House and Senate,
Teach a sharp and timely lesson
In prevention of disaster.
Safety first must be our watchword
If we'd save our public buildings. —N. H.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Love's Detour

PEGGY HOPKINS' new bock is the spring catalogue of husbands.

We read her matrimonial prospectus with some apprehension as we know that the quota is not exhausted.

When Peggy writes about husbands it is a study in mob psychology.

Peg-O-My-Hart, Schaffner and Marx is the first lady orchestra of ex-wives.

"Bugs" Baer

The biggest fight between Florida and California was started by rival orange-grove organizations in an effort to get the monopoly on blossoms for Peggy's mid-weekly weddings.

The quadruple bride tells girls how to capture rich husbands. Romance is all right for Cinderella but you don't expect Peg to get dizzy over a limousine that is going to change back to a pumpkin at midnight.

Some folks have been envious enough to say that Peg's idea of a love letter is a ribbon of tape coming out of a stock ticker.

These catty citizens whisper that Peg grabbed more than her share of husbands and that her alimony reads like a list of the United States Pension Bureau.

We think Peg is more generous than a girl who marries a man and stays that way. At least, Peggy puts her husbands back into circulation.

After all, when it comes to matrimony, it's every man for herself.

We advise all sub-debs to purchase Peg's road map and glossary in order to get the latest financial reports on second-hand husbands and the trade-in value of used bridegrooms.

No girl really marries for money. She gets divorced for that.

We must admire any girl who has hung up such a marvelous record in these days of fierce competition. Why marry a bread-winner when you can elope with the whole bakery?

We feel that this volume will be a valuable addition to the archives of international good-will. It suggests the idea that husbands should be elected for a term of two years like state senators.

We enjoyed the book because we realize that a woman can be married 50 times and still be an elusive sprite.

We trust that Miss Hopkins recovers from her appendix operation for her book places her among the best sellers.

The Play Boy and the Princess

By Herbert Kaufman

A STRANGE assortment of grist has poured out of the group of mills from which the steel corporation rose: libraries—peace endowments—educational boards—hero funds—art museums—tragedy—scandal and coronets.

The Carnegie and Frick fortunes graduated into humanizing and cultural services. John W. Gates carried his profits to the poker table and the stock ticker, whence, in due course of entail, they richocheted through a waster's pocket, to a country-town girl, who reversed the Cinderella legend, married a village clerk and retired those raucous millions from the head-lines.

Dan Reid's split became a Wall street lone wolf and a sordid guzzler. The Moore money went railroading and prancing about horse shows, then branched down the primrose path, into the mires of debauchery, to its appointed rendezvous with scarlet-lipped death.

BUT the estate of Leeds, the tinplate king, had OTHER ambitions. His queen-consort, not content with a courtesy title, changed her check-book to a golden jimmy and broke into the precincts of actual royalty.

She married the brother of an abdicated king, purchased the satisfaction of flaunting the ALMANACH DE GOTHA over local social registers, and slipped the last laugh to Manhattan and Newport snobs who once had lifted lorgnettes and cold shoulders at her audacious intrusion.

And if that weren't triumph enough for ANY woman whom home folks remember in kitchen aprons and calico wrappers, the amazing lady from Indiana capped the climax by soldering her son, AS WELL, into highest aristocracy's precious circle.

Princess Xenia and Billy Leeds might have "lived happily ever after" in a Zenda or Graustark fairy tale, but it was a foregone conclusion that the MIS-MATED pair couldn't long remain united anywhere else.

THE dice are ALWAYS loaded against mesalliances.

Had Constantine regained his throne, it's a moot point as to whether Anastasia could have sustained court right to her exalted status.

The codes ruling such situations are inexorable, as witness, the case of Louis, Fourteenth, and Madame de Maintenon, and the inflexible attitude of precedent toward George the Fourth and his morganatic wife, Mrs. Fitzherbert.

These conceptions are naturally inexplicable and contemptible to democracy, which rejects all assumption of superiority through birth, and denies, in its very charters, the excluding pretensions of caste.

CONSEQUENTLY, there was fated to be slight COMMON ground in the viewpoints of young Leeds and the great-granddaughter of a czar.

Origin, environment and tradition molded their temperaments for incessant conflict.

We are not characteristically adapted to these international adventures. Europe and America do not speak the same fireside language.

Clemenceau couldn't learn it. For every mutually devoted Mary Leiter and Viceroy Curzon—or Vivien Gould and Lord Decies—there are a hundred IRRECONCILABLY antagonistic Dukes of Marlborough and Consuelo Vanderbilts.

The Castellane, Manchester and Yarmouth episodes are further salutary lessons to coat-of-arms shoppers.

But, despite experience, we did nurse a sentimental hankering to see Billy and his kid princess BEAT the odds.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

WANT to cut out bad habits this year?

Want to put your life on a more efficient, honest basis?

THEN, PERHAPS, YOU'D BETTER START BY ELIMINATING SOME OF YOUR "FRIENDS."

Friends . . . that fine old word has become pretty cheap nowadays. We're afraid of loneliness. We dislike exclusiveness. We want to be popular . . . have a gang around . . . be called good fellows—

And, if we've the time and money to spend, it isn't hard. It isn't even necessary to spend much money. People are only too glad to flock around if we'll listen to them and play with them and make over them. With the result that we speedily accumulate a long list of miscellaneous bipeds who use us for a parking station and refer to us as Dear Old Bill or Darling Sally.

Well, that's fine . . . if you've nothing better to do with your life than use it as a parking station. But if you really have ambition and attach some value to your performance it's not so good.

FOR EACH ONE OF THOSE FRIENDS REPRESENTS A DEFINITE INVESTMENT . . . AN INVESTMENT OF TIME, ENERGY, SYMPATHY AND THOUGHT. TO EACH ONE OF THEM YOU GIVE A PIECE OF YOUR LIFE. FOR EACH ONE OF THEM YOU PLACE A PLASTER ON YOUR FUTURE.

IS HE OR SHE WORTH IT?

Stop and think.

You have a certain amount to spend this year . . . a certain amount of time, strength, thought and feeling. These assets are your REAL TREASURE. Money has little value in comparison with them. With these assets you can acquire happiness and power, wisdom and peace. But remember:

THESE QUALITIES ARE LIKE ANY OTHER NEGOTIABLE ASSET. If you waste them, they're gone. If you spend them on worthless objects, you won't have them for the better bargains.

ARE YOUR FRIENDS WORTH WHAT THEY'RE COSTING YOU?

Have they made you a wiser, finer human being?

Have they given you an opportunity for noble service?

Have they started you on a great adventure, stimulated you to brave rebellions?

Have they quickened your mind, mellowed your heart and stiffened your spine?

OR HAVE THEY JUST HELPED YOU KILL TIME?

Text for Today Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also.—John xiv:1-3.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

HUGE thicknesses of white chalk and limestone consist very largely of the microscopic skeletons of foraminifera. The rock of which the pyramids of Egypt are built is composed largely of the shells of eocene foraminifera—and the earth known as "tripoli-tone," used commercially as an abrasive or an absorbent, is composed mainly of radiolarian skeletons, the variety found in the Barbados, containing at least 400 different species.

H. G. Wells.

In the second class of the protozoa, the Flagellata, the individuals are characterized by the possession of one to four long ails or flagella (singular flagellum), and flog themselves along through water much as spermatozoa do.

The group is a large one and profoundly important, both from the practical and the theoretical point of view.

They are of practical importance because they swarm in incredible multitudes in the sea, forming the chief food of a host of crustaceans, young fish and other larger creatures and thus indirectly nourishing man himself.

The diffuse prosphrescence of the sea is due largely to swarms of flagellates. Moreover, there are kinds of flagellate which live parasitically in our bodies or the bodies of our cattle and cause grave tropical diseases, such as the sleeping-sickness of Africa, and the Indian scourge, kala-azar.

And the destructiveness of Termites in the tropics is due to the presence of flagellates which enable them to digest wood.

Theoretically they are interesting because some of them are colored green with chlorophyll, and lie on the border-line between animal and plant, and because others combine together to form little colonies, a link between the independence of amoeba and the communal life of our own body-cells.

A third class are the sporozoa. They are all parasites.

The most troublesome kinds are those of the various mosquito-borne fevers and agues, ranging from the comparatively mild intermittent fevers, which have been abolished by the drainage of our own fen and marsh districts, to the deadly malarias of tropical countries.

The fourth class, the Infusoria, are the most elaborately organized protozoa, and includes some of the largest.

They have definite mouths; their bodies are covered with hard pellicles; instead of one nucleus they have two, of different kinds, one for the chemical business of everyday, the other reserved for sexual union and other rare reproductive occasions.

Instead of one or two propulsive whips, like the whips of flagellates, they possess whole batteries of vibrating hairs or cilia by means of which they swim.

The cilia may be of various shapes and sizes, and are variously arranged on the body, and the modes of progression of their owners are correspondingly diverse. Some infusorians glide more or less smoothly through the water; some crawl and then dart; some spring by means of catapult-like cilia at their hinder ends.

Among the commoner freshwater forms well-known to microscopists are paramecium, the slipper animalcule—quite large for a protozoon, nearly a hundredth of an inch in length and visible as a tiny speck to the naked eye—vorticella, the bell-animalcule, a graceful living goblet fastened to some solid mooring by a long stalk, which can shorten to a tight spiral when the animal is alarmed and so pull it back out of danger—and a host of others.

Attractive though the infusoria are to the possessor of a microscope, they are of little direct importance to man. They do him no good, and, except for one species that lives in the intestines and causes dysentery, they do him no harm.

3 Plant Animals and Seaweeds

Most of the protozoa are quite obviously animals; they wander about and feed in the animal manner. But there are curious exceptions.

There is, for example, a tiny creature known as Euglena, one of the flagellates possessed of a lashing whip by means of which it swims about.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Thoughts while strolling: Those new off-white tones for Milady's dress—biscuit, banana, eggshell and meringue. What became of the margin profits? New York's skyline fashioned in gum drops in a candy store window. Ousted pigeons fluttering over building excavations.

Edgar Selwyn, a Cincinnati, O., boy, who made good in the city. Ladies who pop into hotel lobbies—and pause suddenly in faint timidity. Samuel Hoffenstein, the poet, leaving the Winthrop. A girl in silver slippers at noon. And a dignified old pappy gives vent to a snort.

If perfumes would only live up to their gorgeous bottles. The old-fashioned banker who wears a flat-topped derby. Peter Arno, the artist, and his wife, Lois Long, the writer. The boys in corset fitting overcoats and pulled down derbies.

"Smart" luncheon crowds—the freakish, the fashionable, the notorious and bankrupt. Three red haired women step from a taxi in front of Delmonico's. Earl Carroll in his Hispano-Suiza. Floyd Gibbons, the globe trotting correspondent.

Timid old men who sell brooms at basement doors. The sudden stir around Grand Central just before the 20th Century departs. Sam Taub, the sport writer. The venerable loungers in the lobby of the Murray Hill Hotel. Pool parlor sign: "Recreation for respectables only."

Those bob-tailed Siamese cats on leashes. Something odd about a fat postman. Count Boni's blonde mustache. The ineffable gloom of an armory. Charles Phelps Cushing, another Kansas City Star alumnus. Nobody knows how to cook macaroni anymore.

A Gertrude Stein tea room. Python skin shoes. The bank that furnishes a daily lapel flower to employes. Not so many "Love Nest" headlines in the tabloids since the market crash. The building that is almost entirely tenanted by race track tipsters.

Simile from a window card in a bank: "Save and poverty vanishes like seasickness."

* * *

A gentleman, by the way, who recently cruised to an outer rim of the world says he was sea sick all the way but on the return voyage an old captain told him "to walk himself into a sweat" before breakfast each morning and he would not be troubled. He did—and wasn't.

* * *

The soft drink cocktail has attained remarkable popularity. One hotel menu lists 19 varieties of pre dinner drinks and there is a steady and growing demand in all cafes. The most popular of the moment is chilled tomato juice, spiced with tobasco and Worcestershire sauce. Other favorites have kraut and clam juice as a base. A dress making salon has opened up a bar where soft drink cocktails are served.

* * *

At many homes the only alcoholic cocktails are served in dressing rooms by maids and butlers. It is a London vogue. Over there it has become unfashionable to drink after one has met the host or hostess.

I once attended a New Year's eve dinner party that showed the devastation of a before dinner cocktail splurge. Forty-two guests were invited by the hostess to have cocktails at her home before proceeding to a country club for dinner. It was explained that to comply with rules no drinks would be served at the club. After an agonizing wait, the hostess and five guests sat down to a cold dinner at 11 o'clock. And the next day the hostess went to a sanitarium.

* * *

Cocktails with a kick start off a dinner with a noisy babble but it is noticeable that by 10 o'clock almost everybody is on the verge of a yawn. And not even the latest story of Dorothy Parker will revive a dinner that has sunk.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

ARE you a lodge or club bore? Do you use these agencies to further your business interests?

Worse than this did you join these organizations to afford you more opportunities of presenting your propositions?

Of course you may gain additional business in a perfectly ethical way by belonging to clubs or other affiliations of men.

But if you are the right sort, and what you sell is right, the men you know will naturally think of you when they want something in your line.

If you use your leisure time with these men to interest them in your proposition they will soon tire of you.

Club and lodge association should not be mixed up with business.

There may come a temptation to do so, but you would better curb it.

When men seek recreation they don't want to think of business matters, and if you force the issue by constantly bringing in your commercial lines you antagonize those who might be your friends otherwise.

Be free to enjoy yourself at your club or your lodge and allow others the same privilege.

If you don't you soon find that you are avoided by those who are annoyed by your business propositions.
